U. S. Suit On 'Medical Monopoly' Opens Today

Special Jury Meets Will Hear 100 D. C. Society Accused A. M. A. Co-defendant

By Dillard Stokes.

The Government will open before an extraordinary grand jury in District court today a prosecution destined to evoke Supreme Court pronouncements upon the physician's place in American economy and the degree of social regulation to which the healing art may be subjected.

"Socialized medicine" about which a Nation-wide struggle has raged for years will be the issue underlying charges that the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society are unlawful combinations in restraint of trade. Group Health Association, Inc., which is involved in several lawsuits here, charged that the established groups constitute a monopoly.

100 to Be Witnesses

From 550 citizens summoned by the District jury commission will be chosen 23 men and women to hear evidence gathered in several months of Department of Justice investigation. More than 100 witnesses have been summoned and their testimony is expected to last at least three weeks.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, has charged a number of acts "in restraint of trade" by the physicians' organizations. Among them:

Expulsion by the society of Dr. Mario Scandiffio, of the G. H. A. staff, for "violating certain rules."

The District Medical Society threatened to expel members who joined G. H. A.

The society threatened to expel those who consulted with G. H. A. physicians.

G. H. A. physicians were barred by hospitals here, either in combination with the organizations or due to influence "which may or may not have amounted to coercion."

Alleged to have been violated is Section 1, Title 15 of the United States code, which provides:

"Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court."

Hold Medicine a Trade

John Lewin and Allan Hart, special assistants to the attorney general, will present the case to the special grand jury. Their view is that practicing medicine is, from the legal standpoint, a "trade." The Yale Law Journal, in its May 10 issue, supported this theory.

The A. M. A. vigorously dissented and in August challenged the Department of Justice to take its charges to court. The association said it was "ready for investigation by any authorized agency, . . . that it never has violated the established laws of this country."

The association house of delegates urged its board of trustees "to oppose with its utmost power, even in the courts of last resort, this apparent attempt to convict the A. M. A. in the eyes of the people of being a predatory, antisocial monopoly."

Should the evidence placed before the grand jurors support indictments, these will be asked for criminal conspiracy, it was learned. This broad charge will be made, it was explained, because the law defines conspiracy as concert to accomplish an unlawful purpose, even though all the means are lawful, or to accomplish a lawful purpose by unlawful means.

The panel from which the grand jurors will be chosen will be composed of diverse professions, but there will be no physicians upon it. Their names, like those of lawyers, ministers, Government officials, policemen and firemen, are kept off the jury list.

Ohio Gives Taft a Chance Over Bulkley

New Deal Has Slipped WPA May Save the Day Davey Holds the Key

By Robert C. Albright.
A Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 16.—This Midwestern cradle of politics is rocking in the pitch of a campaign fast and funny enough to bring chuckles from the ghost of Nick Longworth and serious enough to jar Ohio hopes of the New Deal.

Prophecies here are as plentiful and as cheap as the current corn-hog crop, and as unlikely to pay November dividends.

But after discounting the extreme claims of opposing camps, it can be said the Republican Party has a reasonable chance of sending a Senator to Washington and of reclaiming from three to eight House seats now held by Democrats.

That Administration popularity has slipped in Ohio, Republicans affirm and Democrats concede. Democratic leaders say the bogging is confined to a few reform measures. They contend the President's own popularity is untouched. Republicans counter that Mr. Roosevelt isn't running for re-election this time.

As in Pennsylvania, Ohio Democrats have damaged their chances by primary throat-cuttings. And as in the Keystone State, the race is so close that the margin of victory either way should not begreat.

FCC Group Urges Cut in WLW Power

New Permit Opposed Vote Month Away McNinch Neutral Gary 'Not Involved'

Fuel was thrown yesterday on the fire within the Federal Communications Commission when a special three-man committee unanimously disapproved renewal of an experimental license entitling Cincinnati's Station WLW to broadcast with 500,000 watts power.

As forecast in Saturday's Washington Post, the committee recommended that the FCC deny further extension of the license which for over four years has permitted WLW to be the Nation's most powerful radio station. WLW could continue operation on 50,000 watts.

The full commission has yet to pass upon the superpower committee's recommendations. Chairman Frank McNinch of the commission said he thought it would be at least a month before FCC's final decision was taken.

McNinch Denies Opinion

Consisting of Commissioners Norman Stanley Case, T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne, the committee acted in a manner believed opposed to the wishes of Chairman McNinch and Commissioners Eugene O. Sykes and Thad H. Brown.

The seventh member, Commissioner Paul A. Walker, was seen as holding the balance of power.

McNinch stated last night, however, that "I have absolutely no opinion in the matter and will not have until I read all the evidence."

Sykes expressed himself in similar manner.

The FCC chairman said it was he who suggested the membership of the committee.

Denies Gary Involved

Denying reports his recent ouster of Hampson Gary, general counsel of the FCC, sprang from the latter's failure to prevent the superpower committee hearing, McNinch said emphatically there is no "connection whatsoever between the WLW and the Gary case."

Craven and Payne openly defied the wishes of McNinch last week when they opposed dismissal of Gary and urged the Civil Service Commission to retain under the merit system more than 50 FCC positions for which the chairman had asked exemption. Some observers held that Case would have joined them, had he not been ill.

Because of the turmoil within the commission, one Democratic leader in Congress said yesterday that a long-discussed Congressional investigation of the FCC was now inevitable.

Crosley, Payne at Odds

Station WLW is operated by the Crosley Radio Corporation, which last year employed Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, as a public relations adviser at $15,000 per year. Shortly afterwards, Powel Crosley, jr., owner of the station, came into sharp conflict with Commissioner Payne, who asserted Crosley had failed to send him data regarding WLW's operation and profits.

Case, Craven and Payne said WLW's operation of a 500,000 watt station had "contributed to the technical development of radio and augmented the general store of scientific knowledge concerning this invention."

They held, however, that WLW's future experimental plans do not require such extensive power.

Other Stations Handicapped

In addition, the commissioners said, "stations within the area served by WLW have experienced difficulty" in obtaining certain types of advertising.

In selling time to advertisers, they said "representatives of WLW have stressed the point of the tremendous amount of power and the consequent very wide coverage thereby obtained."

For the year ended December 31, 1937, the station's net income after deduction of income taxes was $702,954.61, the commissioners stated.

Security Cards Show Women In Fourth of Insured Jobs

By William V. Nessly.

Women hold 27 per cent of the account numbers issued by the Social Security Board in its old-age insurance program for the Nation's workers, it was revealed yesterday in figures issued by John J. Corson, director of the board's Bureau of Old-Age Insurance. In the District of Columbia they hold 30.7 per cent.

Corson's report on a study of the board's records brought into further prominence the report, and resulting controversy, in which John D. Biggers, director of the special census of the unemployed, called attention to the unexpectedly large number of women holding jobs.

Women's leaders promptly asserted that women were at work only because men were no longer able to be breadwinners. President Roosevelt said he was undecided whether to submit the Biggers figures to the special economic, or "monopoly" committee, as Biggers suggested, or wait until the 1940 census permits an analysis of the causes for so many women taking employment.

The Corson study also revealed

5 Die in Air As 2 Planes Collide, Burn

On Sightseeing Trip Child, 3, One of Victims Sun Blinded Pilot

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 16.—At least five persons, one of them a 3-year-old boy, were killed today when two sightseeing airplanes collided in mid-air on the outskirts of the city.

Known victims were William Stanislaw, 35, pilot of one of the planes; his passengers, Robert E. Lee, 26, and Lee's son, Robert, jr., 3; Walter Paulk, 40, pilot of the second plane, and a passenger, Frank Baby, 24. All lived in Detroit.

Harold Frey, who told police he witnessed the crash, said the pilot of one ship was flying directly into the bright sun and appeared to have been blinded by the glare. The pilot of the second ship, Frey said, climbed rapidly in a vain attempt to avert the collision.

Frey said the planes burst into flame when they collided. One man was thrown clear and his body fell with the machines into a field used as an open-air theater.

The victims were burned so badly it was not possible immediately to learn how many persons actually were in the machines. Police said, however, they believed the five were all that were involved in the accident.

Dead, but Rugged Still, Tiger Bites New York Woman

New York, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Almost anything can happen in Manhattan and usually does, but today was the first time police could remember a woman had been "bitten by a dead lion."

That was the breathless announcement a man made to Sergt. Thomas Manning at the East Fifty-first street station, anyway. The skeptical sergeant sent an ambulance and police car to the house where the woman had her strange accident.

The ambulance surgeon reported to the sergeant that the woman, a cook in the house, had indeed (in a way) been bitten by "a dead lion." She had, the surgeon reported, slipped on a highly polished floor and entangled her foot in a tiger rug in such a manner that one of the tiger teeth cut her toe.

4 Nazis Held For Espionage In Canal Zone

Photographed Defenses Camera Smuggled In N. Y. Trial Starts Today

By the United Press

Colon, Panama Canal Zone, Oct. 16.—United States Army authorities today arrested four Germans, one a woman, after the group had taken photographs of coastal defenses at Fort Randolph.

The four were detained in the guard house at Fort De Lesseps pending further investigation to determine whether they would be held on spy charges.

Those arrested gave their names as Mrs. Ingeborg Guttman, Hans Schackow, Gilbert Gross, and Edward Robert Kuhrig. Mrs. Guttman and Schackow were reported to be employes of the German steamship line, Haphag-Lloyd, with headquarters at Cristobal.

Army officials said the four appeared at noon at the Fort Randolph guard gates and said they were enroute in Kuhrig's car to the post exchange restaurant.

Asked if they had cameras, they reportedly replied "no."

A few minutes later a sentry in the heavily fortified area of Caleta Island, where Fort Randolph is situated, said he found the group taking pictures and when he challenged them they did not stop. He then aimed his rifle and arrested the visitors.

Maj. Gen. David L. Stone later sent the Germans to the guard-house pending an inquiry to deter-

Free Peanuts! Fireplug Saves Steve From Auto

Steve was shaken out of a twilight reverie about 6 p. m. yesterday when an automobile rounding the turn into Fifteenth street mounted the curb and headed directly for his stand.

Instead of plowing through his peanuts and popcorn and over Steve, however, the auto crashed into a fire plug—a scant 2 feet from Steve's stand. The automobile, driven by Mrs. Anna P. Scrivener, of 2210 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was forced to the curb by a speeding automobile which did not stop, police said, listing the accident as unavoidable.

No damage was done to the water plug and the automobile suffered only a bent bumper. But Steve suffered a sudden burst of affection for the fire plug and, beaming, began handing out free peanuts.

Famous Clown Hangs Himself

Paris, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—John Stone, 80, English clown famed for 30 years in both England and France, hanged himself yesterday in a public park of suburban Le Vallois.

Stone returned briefly to the limelight last summer when Queen Elizabeth of England, inspecting the British Hospital in Paris on her state visit with King George VI, was photographed at his bedside.

Publication of the picture in England brought to Stone his sister, Mrs. John Hawthorne, 76, who had not seen him in 30 years.

Japanese Cut Canton Rail Link to Sea

More Troops Landed Resistance Grows Hongkong Line Seized Hankow Drive Gains

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, Oct. 16.—Japanese forces were believed today to have reached the vital Canton-Kowloon railroad in their swift drive against Canton, chief city of South China.

Telephone communications between Canton and this British crown colony were suspended completely, apparently substantiating reports that the Japanese had cut the railroad.

Canton, main gateway for imported arms for China's armies, already had been isolated from the coast by the new Japanese campaign in South China, which spread on both sides of the Pearl River delta.

Reinforcements Landed

Only tortuous water routes were left open after intensive air bombardments had blasted the Canton-Kowloon tracks and a Japanese column had cut the highway above Portuguese Macao on the west bank of the delta mouth.

A new Japanese landing of undetermined strength was reported reliably, meanwhile, on the east bank about 10 miles inland from Hongkong.

Hongkong was threatened with an immediate shortage of green vegetables and other foodstuffs as a result of the South China invasion. Authorities were reported to be negotiating for large supplies from the Philippine Islands. The liner President Coolidge, sailing today from Manila, was said to have loaded a heavy cargo of vegetables.

Japanese said the column which occupied Waichow, about 80 miles east of Canton, Saturday, had crossed the East River and was striking toward the Kwangtung Province capital along the north bank.

Navy Guns Aid Army

Japanese leaders said Poklohsien, a town 8 miles west of Waichow, was their next immediate objective.

Naval guns and airplanes were reported to have cleared the way for the Japanese crossing of the East River. Light tanks rumbled along ahead of the advancing forces.

Chinese military authorities in Canton countered Japanese reports of rapid progress with a declaration that strongly entrenched defenders in the mountains directly east of Waichow were stubbornly resisting the invaders.

Neutral observers saw indications that the invasion of Kwangtung, China's richest and strongest province, was losing some of its initial momentum.

Chinese Defenses Grow

With Chinese defenses reported growing stronger by the hour, these observers raised the question whether the Japanese have once more underestimated the strength and fighting spirit of the Chinese.

Additional Japanese reinforcements were reported arriving at Bias Bay, starting point of the South China invasion about 35 miles up the coast from Hongkong.

These reports gave weight to the belief that Japan may find it necessary to put a larger force than she expected in Kwangtung if a direct attack on Canton were contemplated.

Chinese, however, still refused to concede that Waichow had been captured. They declared only small bodies of Japanese had entered the city and that those had been forced back in disorder.

60 Miles From Hankow

Shanghai, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Japanese announced tonight their combined army and navy drive up the Yangtze River had carried the Rising Sun banner within 60 miles airline of their tricity goal—Hankow, Hanyang and Wuchang.

Japanese advices from the Yangtze front described a day of furious fighting in which the invaders were reported to have occupied Shihhweiyao.

Churchill Calls For U. S. to Help Curb Dictators

King May Visit D. C. White House Guest? Paper Reports Plans Hints Commons Talk

By the Associated Press.

London (Monday), Oct. 17.—The Daily Herald today said a state visit of King George of England to the United States at the end of his Canadian tour next spring would be announced in his speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament November 8.

The Herald said the British Embassy in Washington and the United States State Department were arranging a provisional program for the approval of King George and President Roosevelt.

U. S. Not Notified

[The State Department last night was without any word that King George and Queen Elizabeth would visit the United States on their "good will" trip to Canada, officials said. No word has passed between the two governments regarding such a proposal and consequently no arrangements have been made. It was said, however, that the arrangements reported in London would be in conformity with custom, should the British monarchs come to this country.—Editor's note.]

The program, the paper added, provides for a stay of three days and two nights at the White House and one night aboard a United States warship, with a naval review off the mouth of the Potomac as a crowning event.

Ball at White House

The program includes, the paper said, a state dinner and a ball at the White House;

A dinner and reception given by King George and Queen Elizabeth at the British Embassy in honor of President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, and

A visit to Mount Vernon and the grave of George Washington.

En route home to London their majesties expect to visit Bermuda, the newspaper added.

A brief announcement from Balmoral Castle, Scotland, October 8, said the King and Queen were planning a three-week visit to Canada next year. At the time nothing was said of extending the tour to the United States, though it was pointed out by observers they were likely to do so as a gesture of the "friendship of the two peoples."

By their visit to Washington, King George VI and his Queen would be the first reigning British sovereigns ever to set foot on United States soil.

The visit to Washington would take King George on his second state visit to a foreign country since his accession to the throne. In July of this year he visited France.

Former German Colony Fears Its Return to Hitler

London (Monday), Oct. 17 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail said today civil war threatens the British mandated territory of Tanganyika in East Africa unless the British government ends uncertainty regarding the former German colony.

The Mail's correspondent at Dares Salaam, Tanganyika, reported "reliably" that negotiations for Britain to return the territory to Germany were imminent and that Europeans and natives there were most perturbed, having formed a defense league to resist any attempt to use the mandated territory as a "pawn for European appeasement."

Sees Isolation Futile United Front Asked Rearmament Urged Predicts Conscription

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 16.—Winston Churchill, accused by Reichsfuehrer Hitler of trying to foment war against Germany, tonight appealed to the United States in a transatlantic radio speech to join with Great Britain "before it is too late" and halt the aggressions of the dictators.

The fiery-tongued Churchill, wartime first lord of the admiralty, and now the severest critic of Britain's "knuckling down" to the totalitarian powers, said it was futile for the American people to talk of washing their hands of Europe's troubles.

Churchill said Britain would rearm feverishly and predicted that conscription was not far off.

Silent on War Debt

He made no direct reply, however, to Hitler's accusations against him, nor did he mention to his American audience the unpaid British war debt.

A week ago today Hitler, speaking at Saarbrucken on the Rhine, announced plans to extend his western frontier fortifications and said he distrusted Britain because Churchill, former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and former First Lord of the Admiralty Alfred Duff Cooper might come into power. Their ambition, he said, "would be to start a conflagration . . . they admit this . . . and this forces us to be on guard."

"What we must recognize," said Churchill in his radio talk, "is that parliamentary democracies and liberal and peaceful forces everywhere have sustained defeat.

Democracies "Weaker"

"This leaves them weaker morally and physically to cope with the dangers which have grown vastly.

"If ever there was a time when men and women who cherish the ideals of the founders of the British and American constitutions should take earnest counsel with one another that time is now."

"We are left no doubt as to where American convictions and sympathies lie, but will you wait until British freedom and independence succumb and then take up the cause, when it is three-quarters ruined, yourselves alone?" he asked.

Hits U. S. Isolationism

"I hear they are saying in the United States that because England and France failed to do their duty, therefore the American people can wash their hands of the whole business.

"This may be a passing mood of many people but there is no sense in it.

"If things have become much worse then all the more we must try to cope with them.

Cites Brazilian Situation

Churchill referred to the European unrest and the Spanish strife, and added:

"China is being torn to pieces by a military clique of Japan. The ancient empire of Ethiopia has vanished. Now in South America the Nazi intrigue begins to undermine the fabric of Brazilian society.

"A swift and resolute gathering of forces to confront not only military but moral aggression, resolute and sober acceptance of their duty by the English-speaking peoples would almost between night and morning clear the path of progress and banish from all our lives the fear which already darkens the sunlight to hundreds of millions of men."

Churchill said he had availed himself "with relief" of the opportunity to speak to the United States but added:

"I do not know how long such liberties will be allowed. The stations of uncensored expression

Cardinal Mundelein to Open Eucharistic Congress Today

By Edward Angly.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, Oct. 16.—With thousands of its homes and all of its hotels crowded with visitors, New Orleans awaited tonight the arrival tomorrow of the papal legate, George William Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, as a solemn signal for the opening of the eighth National Eucharistic Congress.

The congress, which is to continue until Thursday, is expected to attract more than 100,000 Catholics to its major ceremonials. It is the first such gathering in this country since 1935, when Cleveland was host.

As never before in their history the 55 Catholic churches of New Orleans were crowded with worshipers today. Venerable St. Louis Cathedral, which is to be the setting for many of the ceremonies of the next four days, drew a constant procession of pilgrims. The city had more visitors than it had ever before attracted, even for the Writer Says President Sees Self 'Liberal'

Is Fighting Type
Opposes New Party
No Surprises in Store

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—President Roosevelt's designation of himself as "a fighting liberal" was told today in a copyright article in the New York Times magazine by Anne O'Hare McCormick, who in 1936 won the Pulitzer Prize for "distinguished service as a foreign correspondent."

In her article, entitled "As He Sees Himself," Mrs. McCormick wrote: "President Roosevelt has dropped the phrase 'a little left of center' to describe the direction of his policy and the slant of his mind.

"He has revived the old-fashioned word 'liberal,' long rather obsolete in the political vocabulary. He refers to himself as 'a fighting liberal,' and declares that he will be found battling for liberal principles as long as he lives, up to 1940 and after 1940, in the White House and after he leaves it."

Democrats Liberal

"The President also designates the Democratic Party as the liberal party in American politics. With some lapses, with frequent exceptions within the ranks, on the whole and as a usual thing it has been the party of progress and the instrument of social reform.

"Since that is proved by the record, he intimates that there is every reason to continue the liberal fight within its ranks and no good reason to establish a new party for the same purpose.

"As for the New Deal, the framework of its reforms is laid down. The objectives and the program are embodied in legislation either enacted or in preparation. Nothing new is contemplated. No 'surprises' are in store.

"From now on, the efforts of the Administration will concentrate on the natural extension and development of principles already accepted. 'More of the same' may be expected, also some corrections and amendments to measure now in force, but not what Mr. Roosevelt calls 'new departures,' real innovations."

Policy Outlined

"The President confesses that, like most good bargainers, he often asks for more than he expects to get, in order to achieve what he deems essential.

"Perhaps the fight for the liberalization of the Supreme Court is an instance of this tactic. Looking back, at any rate, Mr. Roosevelt expresses satisfaction with the consequences of that defeat. The reason he did not claim it as a victory at the time, those in his confidence assert, was because of the possible effect of such an assumption on the court itself.

"Whether or not the most militant phase of the New Deal ended with the unsuccessful interventions in the Democratic primaries last summer, it can be said that the period of pacification is beginning. The new efforts to conciliate business and reconcile the differences of the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. are not merely a pre-election gesture. They are the outgrowth of the European crisis and the settlement made at Munich, but not in the sense in which the President's statement to that effect has been interpreted.

Safeguarding System

"Europe's plight brought home to Washington the urgent necessity of internal unity and the consolidation of forces in the United States. The tense weeks of crisis convinced Mr. Roosevelt not only that the first defense of democracy is strength on the home front but also that if a new synthesis of interests and energies is required to save representative government it must be worked out in this country."

Mrs. McCormick said the President himself amplified these views and opinions in recent conversations with her.

She reported: "The President sounds, in fact, like the liberal he proclaims himself. . . ."

"Mr. Roosevelt's strongest personal conviction," she said, "is that he is safeguarding the American system by applying overdue reforms to adapt it to present conditions. He holds that few Americans oppose the ends he has in view, that most of the quarreling is over the means or the tempo he employes to attain them."

Mrs. McCormick said the President more and more frequently "recalls and quotes" Theodore Roosevelt, but that he gave no indication of leading a third party into politics, emphasizing rather the liberal principles of the Democratic Party.

Hopkins Reports To Roosevelt on Way to Hyde Park

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt arrived at his Hudson River estate tonight for a week's visit after a 7½-hour trip from Washington on which he went over the relief situation with WPA Administrator Hopkins.

The chief problem facing the WPA is to make the $750,000,000 remaining out of this year's $1,455,000,000 appropriation last until March 1, as stipulated by Congress. The President only a few days ago ordered that this be done, but some officials doubted the funds would last.

The President had as house guests tonight Col. the Honorable Arthur Murray, British railroader, and Lady Murray, of Scotland, who arrived today in the liner Cameronia and joined the party at New York. After a few days at Hyde Park, the Murrays will go to Canada for a visit with government officials.

that 54 out of every 100 card holders are under 35, with 30 years or more of work ahead of them before they can claim monthly retirement benefits, provided at the age of 65.

The analysis was based on a 10 per cent sample of more than 36,000,000 applications for account numbers received up to January.

It showed "that the proportion of women among holders of account cards is larger than the proportion enumerated in the 1930 census where women constituted only 22 per cent of the total gainfully occupied population."

The larger representation of women "was especially noted in the younger age groups," the report continued. "In the group 20-24 years old, nearly two out of five are women. Approximately one-fourth of all women and a little less than one-sixth of all men holding account cards are in this age group, which makes up more than 18 per cent of the total.

"In general," Corson reported, "the poupulation represented by this sample of applications is younger than that shown by the census of all gainful workers in 1930. More than 40 per cent of all card holders are under 30 years, and more than 54 per cent are under 35. The median age is 33."

District of Columbia figures in the 10 per cent sampling gave 22,659 card holders, of whom 6,975, or 30.7 per cent were women.

This feminine ratio was not as large as that in the Federal employment here, civil service reports showing that of the 116,963 persons employed by the Government in the District slightly more than 40 per cent are women.

Higher in Some States

Contrary to a popular supposition, however, the District's ratio of women workers, as shown by the social security data, is exceeded by those of several States.

States with textile and other manufacturing industries have the highest rates, 35.8 per cent in Rhode Island; 33 per cent in Massachusetts; 32.9 per cent in New Hampshire; 32 per cent in North Carolina and 31.1 per cent in Connecticut. New York and New Jersey are practically even with the District, each with a rate of 30.6 per cent for the women.

The largest age group of employed women here is that between 25 and 29 years including 18.5 per cent of the District's account card holders. The second age group, 16.2 per cent, is between 20 and 24 years.

The same holds true of the male card holders here.

In both categories, male and female, the per centage of workers here between 25 and 40 is above the national average, with a corresponding lower-than-national ratio in older groups.

District workers on the social security rolls, thus, are shown to be younger than the national average.

Changes Planned

Incidentally the Administration's next step in the proposal to liberalize and extend provisions of the social security act will be a meeting here Friday and Saturday of the advisory councin on social security with officials of the Treasury and the Social Security Board. The council is composed of 25 representatives of the public, employers and employes, designated by the Senate Finance Committee.

The social security program for the next session, intended to head off "crackpot" pension schemes which have found favor in some sections, includes, tentatively, increasing from $15 to $20 a month the Federal contribution to the States' assistance for the aged, reducing from 65 to 60 years the eligibility age for payment of old-age payments, extension of the act's provisions to some 16,000,000 farm and domestic workers, self-employed persons, seamen and others, and beginning payment of old-age pensions in 1940 instead of 1942.

Quezon Sends Vice President To U. S. Parley

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Oct. 17.—Commonwealth Vice President Sergio Osmena departed for the United States today, commissioned by President Quezon to represent the Philippine government in formulating contemplated legislation to change the independence plans for the islands.

Last Wednesday Hoaquin M. Elizalde, newly appointed Phillipine resident commissioner in Washington, announced he was "capable and authorized to handle any legislation arising" from the report of the joint Philippine-American committee which recommended changes in the independence program.

Quezon announced he was sending Osmena to Washington "as my official representative to present the views" of the Commonwealth regarding legislative proposals to carry out the joint committee's recommendations.

1,000 Planes A Month Held Possible

U. S. Estimates Capacity
Reich Production Eyed
Rate Here Now 300

By the Associated Press.

High Administration officials say they are confident that American manufacturers, if need be, could match Germany's huge output of warplanes in quantity, and exceed it in quality.

This expression of opinion was evoked by President Roosevelt's recent announcement that mass production of planes was included in the Government's current restudy of National defense needs.

Not the slightest indication has been given that the Administration is considering undertaking to match Germany's plane production, but the War Department particularly is concerned with knowing whether it could be done.

1,000 Planes A Month

To match the production of the mobilized Nazi plants, officials say they believe the United States would have to turn out 1,000 planes a month. Just now the rate is only a third of that, though it has been stepped up materially in recent months under the stimulus of foreign orders.

The figure of 1,000 monthly for Germany is widely accepted in military aviation circles, rather than the estimate of 20,000 a year just brought back from Europe by Bernard M. Baruch, 1917-18 head of the war industries board.

A production of 1,000 planes a month would be possible in this country, military experts say, by standardizing certain types, and by turning numerous factories from other work to making engines, propellers, wings and other parts.

10,000 Factories Lined Up

Detailed plans already are on file at the War Department, and contracts signed, for harnessing about 10,000 factories to production of munitions and war material generally in an emergency.

This industrial mobilization program, directed by Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, presumably includes at least some mass plane manufacture, but details are confidential.

Other nations have standardized some types and employed mass production, President Roosevelt said, and he intimated clearly an opinion that the United States could do so as well, despite the lack of peacetime military control as in authoritarian Germany.

In quality, both Army and Navy officials say they are confident American planes are the world's best.

Officials Frown On Trade Subsidies For Latin America

By the Associated Press.

The suggestion of Bernard M. Baruch that it might be necessary for the United States to subsidize trade with Latin-America aroused little enthusiasm in official Washington yesterday.

The New York financier himself had said, in an interview Saturday, that the subsidy should be used only as a last resort to combat German advances in Latin-American markets.

Officials here said export subsidies aroused suspicion, even in countries benefiting from such methods. One ascribed this suspicion to questioning regarding political motives behind the subsidies.

Rome, Oct. 16 (AP).—The recall of the Ambassadors of Germany and Brazil was labeled the work of Bernard Baruch, the American financier, in the controlled press today. Il Regime Fascista of Cremona referred to him as "president" of the United States and as the man who controls a "majority • • • directly or indirectly" in the United States.

2,479 Projects Started by PWA; Cost, $550,000,000

The Public Works Administration reported yesterday that work had been started on 2,479 projects to cost $551,275,798 under its new program.

Howard A. Gray, assistant PWA administrator, said that with respect to consruction the program was more than three times further advanced than any previous program. Work is being started on an average of 60 additional projects daily, he added.

Construction already started includes 1,454 non-Federal projects to cost a total of $358,682,76), Gray said, some of which have been completed. Deadline for starting work is January 1.

PWA thus far has approved more than 7,000 projects.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

George F. Ross presented John Alden Finckel and Alice Finckel in a recital of music for violoncello and piano in the Roosevelt Hotel last night. Program: Sonata in G major (Sammartini), Gavotte (Popper), Arioso (Bach), Rondo (Boccherini), Sonata in C minor, Op. 19 (Rakhmaninov).

A pleasant program of compositions for violoncello and piano, neither too short nor too long for a recital-beginning at the leisurely hour of 9:30, was played last evening in the Roosevelt Hotel ballroom by the well-known resident musicians, John Alden Finckel and Alice Finckel. It began with a formal little sonata by Giuseppe Sammartini, a contemporary of Bach. In those days sonatas followed the very simple pattern of a slow movement, set like a somber gem between two allegros flashing with diamantine brilliance. Sammartini was a clever craftsman in this musical jewelry, and had a knack for writing agreeable tunes.

In the following group were clustered a gavotte by David Popper, the violoncellist who provided his colleagues in perpetuity with many charming pieces for the instrument; the familiar arioso by Bach, and a rondo by Luigi Boccherini, who has been so shabbily treated by fate. As popular in his own time as his rival. Haydn, his name is now synonymous with the "celebrated minuet" taken from one of his numerous string quintets. More of his music deserves to be widely known today, for it is characterized by vigorous geniality and melodic inventiveness.

The principal work of the evening was Sergei Rakhmaninov's fine sonata in C minor dedicated to Anatol Brandukov, a work distinguished by a rich poesy, particularly in the remarkable andante with strange harmonic half-lights. Rakhmaninov was 28 when he wrote it, and had just recovered from the period of morbid depression during which he feared that inspiration had left him forever. The music is exultantly fresh and youthful, and fairly bubbles with energetic spirits that seem inexhaustible.

Peace, Freedom Group Splits on Policies

Swarthmore, Pa., Oct. 16 (AP).—The United States section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom today announced it had severed its affiliation with the American League for Peace and Democracy, formerly the American League against war and fascism.

Differences in policies and methods were given as the cause for the severance by the national board of directors which concluded its quarterly meeting today.

U. S. Families Spend Less on Better Food

Lubin Surveys Habits
Clothing Expense Down
Savings Decrease

Americans are spending less money for food than 20 years ago, but their diet is better balanced.

They are purchasing fewer clothes but spending more on housing, including fuel, light and refrigeration.

35 Cities Surveyed

These trends in consumption habits were revealed yesterday by Isador Lubin, commissioner of Labor Statistics, in a report to Secretary of Labor Perkins. The data covered results of a survey in 35 cities, in which a complete realignment of consumer expenditures was revealed.

Food expenditures are generally lower, Lubin said, but purchases of milk, oranges, lettuce, spinach and canned tomatoes which have greater "protective value" show a higher per capita rate in every city surveyed. It indicates that "food consumption of employed workers . . . is nearer the diets recommended by nutrition specialists than the diets of families at about the same general economic level at the end of the war."

A larger proportion of the families have electric lights and modern plumbing.

Clothing Expense Smaller

"Smaller amounts are being spent for clothing in each of the 35 cities," Lubin continued.

"Nowadays when a family has had a successful year, it is quite as apt to think of the automobile as a symbol of success as to turn to new clothes or new furniture for the parlor. At the end of the war period, motor cars were so seldom owned by wage earners and clerical workers that the schedule used in the Bureau of Labor Statistics' investigation of family expenditures at that time classified automobiles with motorcycles and bicycles. Fifteen per cent of the families reported some expenditures for one or another of these three types of vehicles 20 years ago. Among families of similar composition today, approximately 50 per cent own automobiles," the report said.

100 Police Protect Bund Meeting

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP).—More than 100 policemen tonight dispersed a large crowd of protestors outside a German-American bund meeting celebrating the partition of Czechoslovakia.

Police reserves were called when four men, two carrying an American flag and another a sign "German-American League for Culture," broke through police lines and attempted to enter the North Side Hall, but were repulsed at the door.

Non-Partisan Body Favors Barbour

Newark, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—Executive officers of Labor's Nonpartisan League, a spokesman said tonight, have been given authority to indorse the Republican candidate for the United States Senate, W. Warren Barbour.

Device Found To Warn Pilot Of Plane 'Stall'

Big Step Toward Safety NACA Develops Idea Is Air Flow Indicator

By the Associated Press.

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics yesterday announced development of a device which will warn a pilot when his plane is about to stall.

The new instrument turns on a light, blows a horn, or moves the control column when the airplane's speed in the air drops near the point where loss of control occurs.

It is this loss of control that pilots call "stalling." When it occurs, an airplane may fall from 100 to 1,000 feet before the pilot can regain control. A large proportion of airplane crashes occur because of such uncontrolled dives.

Fighting Planes Worst

Stalling is caused by loss of lifting power of the wings. This lifting power results from the rapid flow of air over the upper surface of the wings and when the airplane is slowed down or is made to climb too steeply the air flow changes from a smooth current to a swirling one, destroying the lift and sending the machine into a spin.

F. L. Thompson, research engineer at the committee's Langley Field laboratory, where the new instrument was developed, explained that minimum speed to insure full lifting power of the wings changes under different flight conditions, such as turns, and a pilot cannot rely solely on his air speed indicator in estimating his approach to stalling speed.

This is particularly true of military pursuit or fighting airplanes, Thompson said.

Long Step Toward Safety

"Several such airplanes are easily stalled without warning in violent maneuvers so that such stalling is often inadvertent," he said. It may occur in dive pullouts, sharp turns, loops, or other maneuvers."

The "stall detector" consists of a small piece of wing mounted ahead of the leading edge of the regular wing with an air tube direcly back of it.

When air is flowing smoothly across this small section, while the airplane is in normal flight, the pressure of the air compresses a spring inside the tube. If the air becomes turbulent, indicating a loss of lift, the spring releases slightly, closing an electrical circuit, and the pilot is warned.

Dr. George W. Lewis, research director for the committee, said the indicator should "go a long way toward eliminating accidental spins."

Irish Demonstrate Against Partition

Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—A personal message from Eamon De Valera, brought from Dublin by courier, cheered more than 2,000 persons who gathered here tonight to demonstrate against the partition of Ireland.

"There is no need for me to assure you that I regard ending the unnatural division of our country as a matter of vital concern, not merely for the people of the six counties who are suffering immediately from it, but for the people of all Ireland and for the Irish race throughout the world," De Valera's message said. "It is also a matter of concern for the people of Britain. As long as partition lasts, mutual good will between the peoples of the two islands, which is becoming more and more essential to their safety and well being, cannot be secured."

Actress Dorothy Boyd Held After Auto Crash

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Dorothy Sebastian Boyd, 32-year-old actress, was held temporarily at the county jail today following a traffic crash in which her car was involved.

Sheriff's officers booked her on suspicion of drunken driving, a misdemeanor. She was released later under $150 bail, pending appearance tomorrow in Beverly Hills justice court. No one was injured in the collision.

Runciman to Continue Flight Home Today

Miami, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Capt. Alex Papana, Rumanian army air ace, announced tonight he will take off from Municipal Airport here at dawn Tuesday on the second leg of an 11,000-mile New York to Bucharest flight by way of South America and Africa.

Hull Reassures Fish on U. S. PalestinePolicy

To Protect Interests British Await Report No Decision Near

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of State Hull advised Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, yesterday that the British foreign office had confirmed this Government's understanding that no decision would be made on Palestine's future until the Palestine Partition Commission makes its report.

Hull wrote Fish in reply to a telegram from the New York Congressman expressing concern over reports that Great Britain was considering ending Jewish immigration into Palestine.

The letter, made public by Fish, called attention to the State Department's statement last Friday that the United States would "take all necessary measures for the protection of American rights and interests in Palestine."

Hull added:

"I may state that the British foreign office confirms this Government's understanding that no final decision respecting the future of Palestine is to be made before the report of the Palestine Partition Commission (Woodhead Commission) is in the hands of the British government. The telegram added that the report has not yet been signed and that it is not expected to be completed before the latter part of October."

Hull's letter said Ambassador Kennedy also had advised that the British colonial secretary had assured the House of Commons that it would not "be put in a position of having to confirm or reject a decision already taken and put into operation, but would have an opportunity of considering the policy of the British government with respect to Palestine before it was adopted * * *."

"We have kept constantly before the British government the interest which the American people have in Palestine and I have every reason to believe that that government is fully aware of public opinion on that matter in this country," Hull's letter continued. "You may be sure, however, that we shall continue to follow the situation with the closest attention and that we shall take all necessary measures in connection with developments relating to that country that may be practicable."

20-Year-Old Plane Crossing Continent

Burbank, Calif., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Jack Knight, who made the first night airmail flight in 1923, took off today for New York City in a 20-year-old De Haviland plane, powered by a Liberty motor, in a hop designed to show the progress of aviation in the last two decades.

"I expect to cover 650 miles by nightfall," he said. He plans to reach New York Thursday, with 33½ hours of elapsed flying time.

March Field, Calif., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Col. Percy E. Van Nostrand, 51, who became commanding officer here October 1, died last night of a heart attack.

Col. Van Nostrand was transferred here from the general staff at Washington, D. C., to succeed Col. John H. Pirie. Entering the army as a second lieutenant of infantry in 1912, he transferred to the air service in 1920.

At Home's Anniversary Dictatorship Feared Stalin Held 'Unsteady'

America is faced with the loss of the ideals of home life—that bond of love between husband and wife and parent and child, the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany and chaplain of the Senate, said yesterday, speaking at services in commemoration of the thirty-second anniversary of the dedication of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

Signs that the ideal of the home as the family group is fading foretell dangers of dictatorship in this country, the Rev. Mr. Phillips warned and urged Masons and Eastern Star members to gird themselves in defense of the American ideals of freedom and love for one another.

About 250 members of the two orders attended commemoration services in the chapel of the home, 6000 New Hampshire avenue northwest, sponsored by the Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star of the District.

Dr. Phillips, referring to totalitarian states he visited three years ago, said religion has not been obliterated by iron discipline of dictatorship, but is an indomitable force underneath the surface in all the countries.

He mentioned Russia, charging that "Stalin is on a more unsteady throne today than ever were any of the Caesars." He added that the Bolshvist movement is "tottering."

Members of the two orders climaxed the services by planting an elm alongside Eastern Star Lane, leading to the home, which houses 81 aged and infirm persons.

Mrs. Katherine M. L. Gude, grand matron of the Grand Chapter when the cornerstone was laid for the home in 1905, outlined the history of the home, which had an endowment of $4,000 in 1914 and now has an endowment of more than $225,000. Members of the Masons and O. E. S. built the home after 10 acres of land had been donated.

Other speakers on the program yesterday were Mrs. Helen D. Robbins, worthy grand matron; Mrs. Julia N. Streater, president of the home; Harry J. Schmidt, worthy grand patron; Blair McKenzie, chairman of the committee on arrangements. Music was furnished by the Grand Chapter's choral unit of 25 women, under direction of Theodore C. Lewis and Mrs. Leonor Elbert Reed.

Takoma Fireman Beats D. C. Squad In Saving Kitten

A small gray kitten of uncertain parentage owes its life today to the training of a Takoma Park, Md., volunteer fireman.

At Third and Emerson streets northwest yesterday, H. E. Marschalk investigated a crowd at the mouth of a sewer. There were sounds of a kitten in distress and Marschalk saw it swimming feebly in murky water.

He leaned down, holding with one hand, pulled the kitten from the water and administered artificial respiration. He was gone and the kitten was recuperating in the sun when a Washington fire rescue squad, previously summoned, clanged to the scene.

Young Bandit Takes $5 From Auto Employe

An armed youth early yesterday held up George Dufrane, Alexandria, night manager of Hill & Tibbetts, 1423 L street northwest, and robbed him of $5.

Dufrane told police the thief, carrying a revolver, forced him to open the cash register and took only the bills. The bandit fled, leaving behind several dollars in change

U. S. Approves Child Agencies In 31 States

Labor Permits Valid Wage Law Involved Others in Negotiation

By the Associated Press.

The Children's Bureau of the Labor Department designated 31 States yesterday whose certificates of age will have the same standing under the wage-hour law as a Federal certificate, during the first six months after the labor standards act becomes effective October 24.

The wage-hour law forbids employment of children under 16 in interstate industries, but provides that an employer is protected from unwitting violation of this clause if he has required his employes to present certificates of age issued by the Children's Bureau, or a State agency approved by the bureau.

The States whose certificates of age have been accepted by the bureau are Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Herriot Warns Of Crises to Come; Defends Daladier

Lyon, France, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Edouard Herriot, president of the French Chamber of Deputies, broke his silence since the Munich accord by telling the nation today that one crisis had passed, but that more were coming.

The veteran political leader, who has been premier three times, struck back at government critics who feel that dismemberment of Czechoslovakia was too high a price to pay for peace.

Speaking before a meeting of the local Radical Socialist organization, Herriot said the government had "lacked both time and the means for action."

He said it was unjust not to remember that Premier Edouard Daladier during the Czechoslovak crisis worked under circumstances created by mistakes of past governments.

Rebel Bombs Peril British Warship

Valencia, Spain, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Five insurgent planes were reported to have dropped bombs today within 30 yards of the British destroyer Imperial, anchored a half mile outside Gandia, British-operated port on Spain's Mediterranean coast.

The decks of the destroyer were sprayed with bomb splinters, but no one was injured.

Insurgent authorities were said to have apologized to British officials.

Madrid, Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Five Italian-made bombing planes today raided Alcoy, on the Mediterranean coast about 35 miles north of Alicante. Three persons were reported killed, 27 injured and 17 buildings destroyed.

2-Day Air Show Closes

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Salisbury residents brought their eyes back to earthly things tonight after two days which most of them spent looking skyward while pilots, local and imported, put on the first air show ever held on the lower Eastern Shore.

C. & O. Canal Restoration Work Begun

CCC Starts Task Water to Be Drained Plan Recreation Area

Civilian Conservation Corps youths Saturday began the actual work of converting the historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal into a recreational parkway.

First objective of the workers is the restoration of a 3½-mile stretch of the canal between Lock 14 and Widewater, above Cabin John.

For the most part, their work will be dredging out the canal, draining off the shallow water and cutting away vegetation.

Beside the canal are the old tow paths, along which mules used to walk pulling heavy flat-bottomed barges between Cumberland and Washington. Work begun Saturday is the first step in restoration of a 22-mile stretch of the Canal from Rock Creek to Senaca, Md.

Superintendent of the project is Lieut. Col. L. G. Heider, Organized Reserves.

For four months, 180 boys in Camp FP1—the youths who began work Saturday—have been turning their tent city along the banks of the canal into a modern post, with wooden barracks to withstand the rigors of winter.

The same job of bedding down for the winter, however, is going on about half a mile up the canal at Camp FP2, where 170 CCC boys are located. When they have built their post they will join the restoration work.

Tractors, steam dredging shovels and the most modern equipment are housed at the two camps.

Promoted by George Washington 154 years ago, the canal was built 110 years ago. Most of the canal has become little more than a ditch containing about 2 feet of water. Neglected and forgotten, the canal popped back into the limelight when the Department of Interior recently announced it had acquired the property and planned to restore it, making it a retreat for tired businessmen, Government employes and the public in general.

Fascist Condemns Women's Freedom In Democracies

Rome, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Prof. Nicola Pende, one of Italy's best-known scientists, said today the government's anti-Jewish program must be augmented by a "reclamation of femininity" to put Italian women back in the home where they will bear healthy children for the state.

The professor, lecturing before the Fascist Cultural Institute at Reggio Emilia, urged Premier Mussolini to forbid Italian women from obtaining degrees in law, architecture and medicine.

He condemned freedom of women in democratic nations and in Russia where, he said, women have become "biological paradoxes."

British Paper Calls Lindbergh Kibitzer

London, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has become a European "busybody," the Sunday Express said today, adding fuel to the charge of 11 Soviet fliers that the American aviator is pro-Nazi and played a part in the Czech war crisis by informing British Conservatives that the Russian air force is weak.

"How does he (Lindbergh) come to be Europe's busybody?" the Express asked. "What nobody seems to know, and what many would like to know, is what is behind all this mysterious activity. Does Lindbergh represent anyone, or is he merely a somewhat indiscreet private person?"

Glenda Farrell Elected 'Mayor'

North Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16 (A.P.).—Glenda Farrell, who turned her back on her campaign for "mayor" of North Hollywood two days ago in favor of a vacation trip to New York City, won the office today nearly 3 to 1 over Bing Crosby.

The actress had 2,550 votes to 902 for Crosby and 738 for Lewis Stone, film character actor. Frank L. Shaw, Los Angeles mayor recalled several weeks ago, received 81 votes.

The position is an honorary one, corresponding to those held by Al Jolson at Encino, Andy Devine at Van Nuys and Hugh Herbert at Studio City.

2 Children Perish In Blazing Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 16.—Two colored children, Charles Bullett, jr., 12, and his sister, Genevieve, 6, were fatally burned when fire of undetermined origin destroyed their home this morning.

The father rescued his wife and three other children, but flames prevented efforts to rescue the other two.

D. C. Woman Throws Self Under Train

Was U. S. Employe Body Torn to Shreds Lay Down on Rails

A red-haired young woman, identified as Miss June Elizabeth Nicholson, 32, employed by the Farm Credit Administration, was instantly killed by an eastbound B. & O. express train one-half mile south of Randolph Station, Md., yesterday.

G. Miller, fireman, said he saw the woman walking toward his train when she flung herself down on the track and was struck before the heavy train could be slowed.

Her body, torn to shreds under the wheels, was scattered 100 yards along the track.

"In Poor Spirits"

A vice president of the road, riding on the train, made an investigation and the train continued on into Washington.

Mrs. Clara F. Wyvell, proprietor of the boarding house at 1312 Sixteenth street northwest, where Miss Nicholson lived, said the young woman had been in "poor spirits" for some time. Yesterday, Mrs. Wyvell said, she had dinner and left, saying she was going to visit a brother, Charles M. Nicholson, in Garrett Park, Md., near which place she was killed.

She left a large envelope, Mrs. Wyvell said, to be delivered personally to a sister, Mrs. Roy F. Hendrickson, in Silver Spring, Md.

The body was taken to the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home in Rockville, Md., and the sister sent for to complete identification. The brother could not be located immediately.

Pocketbook Identified

Montgomery County Justice of the Peace Charles W. Spang, acting coroner, issued a certificate of suicide after an investigation by himself and Dr. C. V. Hartley, acting coroner's physician.

Miss Nicholson was a native of Minneota, Minn., and attended the University of Minnesota, the University of Idaho and Cornell University, where she received her A. B. degree. She had been employed by the Government since 1933.

Roy F. Hendrickson, her brother-in-law, who identified her pocketbook and its contents and her clothing, said she had been ill two years.

Finances Tangled, Printer Ends Life

George Smith, a printer, was found hanging to a rafter in his cottage at Woodland Beach, Md., on the South River below Annapolis, yesterday, a rifle on the floor beneath his body. He was 40 last Friday.

Police found a note in the cottage mentioning financial trouble and declaring, "I am taking the kindest way out." His wife and two children in Audubon, N. J., were notified.

An inquest will be held today at 8:30 a. m.

Irked Elephant Seeks Quiet at World's Fair

New York, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Japino, a 4½-ton female elephant, broke her chain in a fit of temper today and lumbered about the World's Fair grounds for an hour, scattering crowds of early arrivals at the "Whirl of Tomorrow" actors' benefit carnival.

However, Japino made no effort to molest anyone, apparently being desirous only of finding a quiet nook. She was led back to captivity by her trainer.

Japan Mans Border Lines Against Soviet

Reich Diverts Russia
Strong Base Built

By H. O. Thompson.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Hailar, Northwest Manchukuo, Via Shanghai, Oct. 16.—The Japanese Kwantung army, reinforced by hardy Manchu and Mongol horsemen of Japan's Manchukuoan protectorate, is ready for any "diversion" Soviet Russia may attempt as a result of Japan's invasion of South China and the anticipated early Japanese capture of Nationalist China's provisional capital in Hankow.

Thousands of Japanese soldiers are strung along Manchukuo's northern and eastern frontiers ready for anything that may happen.

I flew to this outpost, within 125 miles of the Soviet border, last week to find out exactly what the outlook is now that Japan has risked a vast new campaign in South China, by her drive on Canton, and what I have seen convinces me that:

The Japanese do not expect new Soviet attacks on the borders of their Manchu and Korean protectorates, similar to those which occurred in late July and early August when Japanese pressure on Hankow first became acute, but they are taking no chances and are strengthening their defenses.

Japanese army commanders on the Soviet frontier are convinced Japan could take on Russia's independent Far Eastern Army in addition to China, if necessary, but they think action against Russia should not be considered now if it possibly can be avoided.

The Japanese are convinced Russia started the Korean border fighting around Changkufeng Hill late last summer deliberately and their reason was to assist China by forcing Japan to withdraw some of her best troops from the Hankow sector to the Soviet frontier.

The Japanese assert the victories of their German near-allies in Europe have forced Russia to change her whole military policy and have changed the situation which prevailed here in August.

Japan rapidly is welding Inner Mongolia into a strong buffer state which counteracts the military importance of Russia's outer Mongolian protectorate.

The prospect of any new Russo-Japanese war is remote since Japan will have her hands full in China for a long time, while Russia, facing Germany's eastward drive in Europe, obviously will hesitate to embark on any sort of an adventure in the Far East.

No Recent Clashes

It is significant that there has been no border clash, similar to the scores which took place prior to Changkufeng, in recent weeks, despite the fact the Japanese are extending their lines and strengthening their fortifications.

In a week's tour of the Hailar area I was, naturally, not permitted to see details of the Japanese defense system but I was shown enough to convince me that Japan is in this part of the world to stay and she will go forward rather than retreat.

Hailar, formerly a small Manchu-Mongol trading station on the old Chinese Eastern Railway, now has become a vast military center.

There is a large military airdrome here from which Japanese scout planes keep continuous watch along the border. Permanent barracks of brick and stone line a huge drill ground and house an important part of the 400,000 or more Japanese soldiers who alternate in border outposts.

Churchill Calls for U.S. to Help Britain, France Curb Dictators

are closing down; the lights are going out, but there is still time for those to whom freedom and parliamentary government mean something to consult together."

The American people, he said, realize perhaps more clearly than the British and French public "the far-reaching consequences of the abandonment and ruin of the Czechoslovak Republic."

He said that if, last spring, Britain, France and Russia had stood up strongly to Hitler and warned him against "unprovoked aggression" the Fuehrer would have been "deterred from his purpose."

Then, Churchill added, the opportunity would have been afforded to bring the peace-loving and moderate forces in Germany "together with the heads of the German army" into an agreement permitting the re-establishment of "something like sane and civilized conditions in their own country."

"If the risks of war, which were run by France and Britain at the last moment had been boldly faced in good time and if plain declarations had been made and meant, how different would our prospects be today," he said.

"But all these backward speculations are useless. It is no use using hard words among friends about the past and reproaching one another for what cannot be recalled. It is the future, not the past, that demands our early and anxious thought."

Churchill then made his plea for United States collaboration with Britain to halt the march of the dictators.

"All the world wishes for peace and security. It is their heart's desire. But have we gained it? That is what we ask. Have we gained it by the sacrifice of the Czechoslovak republic?

"That republic was the model democratic state of Central Europe, a country where minorities were treated better than anywhere else, but it was deserted and destroyed and now it is being digested."

"Is this the end or is there more to come? . . . Can peace, good will and confidence be built upon some mission of wrong-doing backed by force? . . . Has any benefit or progress ever been achieved by the human race through submission to organized and calculated violence?

"If we look back over the long history of the nations we must see that, on the contrary, their glory has been founded upon the spirit of resistance to tyranny and injustice, especially when those evils seem to be backed by heavier force."

Churchill bitterly condemned the totalitarian nations for a "theme which leaps out upon us from the Dark Ages—racial persecutions, religious intolerance, deprivation of free speech, the conception of the citizen as a mere soulless fraction of the state.

"To this has been added the cult of war; children are being taught in their earliest schooling the delights and profits of conquest and aggression," he said.

"Like the Communists, the Nazis tolerate no opinion but their own; like the Communists they feed on hatred; like the Communists they must seek from time to time, and always at shorter intervals, a new target, a new prize, a new victim.

"The dictator . . . can go forward; he cannot go back . . . all strong without, he is all weak within."

Churchill warned against underrating the power and efficiency of the totalitarian state, however.

Democratic countries, with their rights of freedom, are at a grievous practical disadvantage against the dictators, Churchill said.

He described Germany's great strength in the air and the "blackmailing power of air bombing" of civilian population, which he described as "the most monstrous menace to peace, order and fertile progress that has appeared in the world since the Mongol invasions of the thirteenth century."

Aerial warfare is horrible, he said, but it is a menace which must be met by resistance rather than submission.

The means of resistance remain, he asserted, to cope with a situation where "Europe lies at this moment abashed and distracted before the triumphant assertions of dictatorial power."

Churchill told his American audience that, even though they may be protected by the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, they are "increasingly involved spectators of these tragedies and crimes."

If the "remaining forces of civilization, which are overwhelming, were united in a common conception of right and duty there could be no war," he said.

The German people, he said, are "industrious, faithful, valiant, but alas, lacking in the proper spirit of civic independence" and if they can be liberated "from their present nightmare" they can be brought into the world movement for peace.

"We have the thundering world forces upon our side. They have but to be combined to be obeyed. France must start, Britian must start, America must start."

Churchill said that Britain would rearm heavily and predicted conscription.

"The British people will stand erect and will face whatever may be coming. But my friends, these instrumentalities, as President Wilson called them, are not sufficient by themselves. We must add to them the power of ideals.

"You see these dictators on their pedestals, surrounded by their soldiers and the truncheons of their police. On all sides they are guarded by masses around them and airplanes, fortifications and the like. They boast and vaunt themselves before the world.

"Yet, in their hearts there is an unspeakable fear. They are afraid of words and thoughts. Words spoken abroad, thoughts stirring at home, all the more powerful because forbidden.

"They are afraid of the workings of the human minds.

Dictatorships can not endure, he said, when they are brought in contact with the healthy outside world.

Britain Will Fight, Speaker Declares

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 16.—The people of England, having first "looked over the abyss" and later had "a glimpse of a possible better world" will seek peace up to the last possible moment, but anyone who believes they would not defend themselves against aggression or protect their liberties and culture is "disastrously mistaken," the Very Rev. Walter Robert Matthews, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, said this morning at Trinity Church, here.

Dean Matthews arrived here Wednesday night for lecture engagements at Harvard and Yale universities. His appearance at the church was billed in the October calendar with the condition, "war permitting."

Arabs Set Up 'Shadow Rule' In Holy Land

Sinn Fein Is Pattern
Abdul Rahim Leader
Foreign Aid Denied

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Bethlehem, Oct. 16.—A visit to the mountain stronghild of the Arab army in Palestine, the first ever made by a foreign journalist, has revealed a Moslem "shadow government," similar to that established in Ireland in 1916 in the Sinn Fein revolt against British rule.

The Arab rebels have divided the Holy Land into four military and administrative districts and British military authorities, determined to stamp out the increasing bloodshed, have posted rewards totalnig $11,250 for the six most important Arab leaders.

Within the past few weeks the organization of the revolt has extended to the establishment of trained fighting units, intelligence services, saboteurs, courts that impose death sentences on Arab "betrayers" and pension schemes for the families of Arabs killed in fighting.

Leader of all this Abdul Rahim, a wealthy country squire, a fanatic Moslem nationalist and the roving commander in chief of the guerilla bands engaging the British in widespread fighting.

Although he is the generalissimo of the revolt, Abdul Rahim is responsible to the insurgent headquarters across the frontier in Damascus where Ibrahim Khalil Kelissa directs the insurrection with a price of $2,500 on his head.

Abdul Rahim also has a $2,500 reward on his turbaned head.

The British, under High Commissioner Sir Harold MacMichael, have offered other rewards for Abdul Rahim's four district military leaders, including Arif Abdul Razek, who received the United Press correspondent in a mountain hideaway.

Captured Mail Censored

A reward of $2,500 is out for Abdul Razek, who rode out to meet the correspondent on a gray Arab steed captured by the Arabs from H. M. Foot, former district commissioner of Nablus. Abdul Razek is in charge of the Nablus district.

Yussef Abdurra directs the revolt in the Haifa and Nazareth regions, with a reward of $2,500 out for him; Ahmad Zawata, who is hunted under a $1,250 reward, handles the Jaffa dictrist, and Abdul Kader Husseini, a son of the late Kazem Pasha El Husseini and cousin of the exiled Grand Mufti, commands the Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Beersheba districts.

The Arab revolutionary regime, calling itself the "Provisional Arab Government," has started censoring all mail captured in raids on post-offices and mail trucks.

Deny Fascist Aid

Abdul Razek told the United Press correspondent that even 50,000 British troops would not be able to put down Moslem determination to protect and hold the Arab lands of Palestine.

"What about the rumors that Germany and Italy are aiding the revolt, supplying arms and munitions?" he was asked.

The Arab army, he explained, has only a few submachine-guns and a few trench mortars captured from the British.

"If we were getting equipment from abroad, don't you think that the first thing we would ask for would be some shells and ammunition for the trench mortars and machine guns?" he said.

Irish Rebellion Sudied

"As a matter of fact, we don't have enough ammunition for the French rifles which we have smuggled in from Syria."

That proves, he said, the Arabs are fighting their own battle for their own national cause.

Abdul Rahim, the commander in chief, has been studying the history of the Sinn Fein revolt in Ireland, including the bloody Easter Rebellion, and is patterning his military activities after it.

His military and civil rules are of the rough and ready sort, often extremely cruel, but the Arabs obey them without hesitation.

New Drive Opened

Jerusalem, Oct. 16 (AP).—Great Britain launched a forceful new campaign today to break Arab resisaence to her rule in Palestine.

It was started by Sir Harold Alfred MacMichael, high commissioner for Trans-Jordan and commander-in-chief in Palestine, immediately after his arrival by airplane in the Holy Land from London.

The new measures were based on the high commissioner's conferences in England with Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary, and were explained in detail to civil and military authorities in the Holy Land.

Persistent terror has inflamed Palestine since the ambushing of a bus began a reign of bloodshed last July 5.

There have been thousands of casualties. Unofficial estimates placed the toll since October 1 alone at 358 persons killed, including 270 Arabs and eight Britons.

Churchill Answers Hitler

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Winston Churchill, British statesman accused by Reichsfuehrer Hitler of being a man "who likes to make war," is shown in a radiophoto as he made a radio address from London yesterday, answering Hitler. He called for a common front against dictators.

Church Riches Denounced by Hitler's Paper

Profiteering Charged
Anti-Semitism Revived
Synagogue Demolished

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Oct. 16.—The Vienna edition of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter raised the question today of "millions of marks" worth of Catholic Church property in Austria which "it does not seem easy to socialize and in some way make useful to the community." (The mark is valued at 40 cents.)

The newspaper said foundations and cloisters hold more property than "any layman, even more than the state."

Title of the full-page attack was "Rich Churches—Poor People" and the occasion was street collection day for the Nazi Party's worker relief fund.

Coincident with the Nazi-Catholic differences, which flared into a Nazi attack October 8 against the palace of Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, there has been a new wave of anti-Semitism against the some 220,000 Jews remaining in Vienna.

Windows in 20 buildings—synagogues, private dwellings and some stores operated by Jews—were smashed in the last two nights.

The interior of one small synagogue was demolished last night.

Hitler's newspaper said that through the winter relief fund "the German people are fulfilling God's words which say: Feed the hungry, warm the cold, clothe the naked.

"How much more help could be given if those who recite these words in prayer would do something positive.

"What possibilities, what means stand at their disposition!"

Collectors shaking tin boxes combed all streets while brass bands and trucks with loud speakers stirred Vienna into action.

Some collectors stood by the doors of St. Stephen's Cathedral. One girl wore a "jump-in" suit with a gas mask and steel helmet.

The cathedral was filled with worshippers all morning, but no mention was made in the sermon of Nazi attacks against the church.

However, there were Catholic demonstrations in three districts of Vienna when high mass in local churches ended in the morning.

After leaving the churches the congregations assembled on the sidewalks and sang hymns until dispersed by the police.

The Pazmaneum Preparatory School for Boys who intend to become priests, one of the few confessional schools left in Austria, was closed yesterday after the pupils were told to leave the building.

Speaking of the wealth of the church, Hitler's newspaper said:

"On one side are these millions worth of dead and highly lively capital in jewels, cloisters and castles, in land and richly productive factories, and on the other side in church dioceses are hundreds of thousands who are cold and hungry, poor and needy, for whom the church and priests do nothing.

Hungary Arms, But Still Seeks Land in Peace

Thousands Mobilize
Want Czechs to Confer
Court Foreign Aid

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Oct. 16.—Hungary, with thousands of reservists answering a call to arms, still sought a way tonight to bring peaceful pressure to bear on Czechoslovakia to negotiate their territorial dispute.

Although thousands of workers and farmers rushed to military training centers from all sections of Hungary in response to a mobilization of about 200,000 men, officials emphasized the call was for peace, not for war.

The cabinet examined replies to a note Hungary addressed to Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany—signatories of the Munich agreement—and to Poland, asking a conference on other means to compel Czechoslovakia to fulfill Hungary's demands for cession of Hungarian-populated areas of Czechoslovakia.

It was not disclosed how many governments answered the Hungarian note, but it was known that Germany, Italy and Poland had made proposals to settle the Hungarian-Czechoslovak dispute.

Hungary still demanded all districts in which a 1910 census showed more than 51 per cent of the population said its language was Hungarian.

She demanded, also a plebiscite in Slovakia and Ruthenia "in accord with the Munich agreement," presumably on the assumption that a majority in both districts would favor union with Hungary.

Prague, Oct. 16 (AP).—Czechoslovakia renewed her efforts today for a territorial settlement with neighboring Hungary at the same time as a number of men described as Hungarian citizens faced a courtsmartial in the Ruthenian city of Mukacevo.

The accused face possible death sentences. They are charged with blowing up bridges, cutting wires and attacking a train and they include men said to be officers and men of the Hungarian army.

Russia Wins Farm Revolt, Lecturer Says

Food Held Plenteous
Spies Infest Country
Cultural Society Hears

Soviet Russia has now won its agricultural revolution, "second in importance only to the revolution of 1917," Corliss Lamont, lecturer and author, yesterday told an audience of 300 at a meeting in the Gingham Club, sponsored by the Washington Cultural Society.

Five years ago, Lamont recalled, Russia "was in the midst of the battle for collectivization of the farms—and the program was not going too well." Referring to "excellent conditions" at present prevailing on collective farms in Ukraine, he asserted that Russian stores "now are over flowing with food."

Consumers' goods also are available in abundance in Soviet shops, he stated, adding that "the Soviet people are finally cashing in on their tremendous efforts during the first five-year plan to construct the bases of socialism."

Leading capitalists of the world "have been pouring millions of dollars into spying activities inside Russia," it was charged by Dr. John H. Gray, former head of the economic department at American University, who presided over the meeting.

"Prime Minister Chamberlain hates Mussolini, but he hates Russia more," Dr. Gray said, contending that "England's Tory government is mortally afraid of internal revolution in case of war."

QUIZ FOR SECRETARIES NUMBER 17

Question: What's the "short cut" for centering headings on a page?

Answer: Set paper gauge at zero, so left hand edge of sheet is at zero on the scale. Set printing indicator on the mark which represents one half the width of paper. Then press back spacer once for each two letters of heading as you spell it out. Now type out heading and it will be centered.

'Soundings' Reported 4 Points to Be Proposed Appeasement Included

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 16.—Diplomats tonight said Reichsfuehrer Hitler has made "tentative soundings" in London seeking formal talks in the near future on a four-point program involving an arms agreement and a general appeasement of Anglo-German friction.

Hitler's informal approach was reported coincident with indications Britain plans immediate intensificaion of "full speed" rearmament despite a burst of anti-British tirades in the German press.

The German press, obviously inspired, has taken the view that Britain's speed-up is an unfriendly gesture in view of the four-power collaboration that prevented war in Czechoslovakia and the agreement signed by Hitler and Prime Minister Ueville Chamberlain that their peoples are resolved "never to fight each other again."

Hints Dropped by Berlin

Chamberlain's cabinet, which will meet Wednesday for the first time since settlement of the Czech crisis to discuss rearmament needs, was understood to be anticipating an early proposal from Hitler for the opening of negotiations on Anglo-German appeasement.

Based on hints dropped by Berlin, diplomats believed that Hitler would suggest:

An Anglo-German air pact.

Some satisfaction of Germany's colonial demands.

Possible revision of the Anglo-German naval treaty of 1935 which permitted Germany to build up to 36 per cent of British tonnage.

There have been many reports that Germany already has proposed air and disarmament pacts but it was learned that no definite proposals have been forthcoming from the Reich thus far.

Following Up Munich Talk

These subjects were touched on tentatively, however, by Hitler and Chamberlain in the four-power Munich talks on September 29 and 30 and Germany, it was understood, has followed them up in the last two weeks with "tentative soundings" foreseeing formal talks in the near future.

Offsetting any German proposals, however, is a measure of resentment in British government quarters regarding German press attacks on Chamberlain for his failure to follow up the Munich accord by offering satisfaction to Germany on the colonial question and his decision to intensify re-armament.

Such attacks, it was pointed out in Whitehall, cannot be expected to provide favorable ground for beginning negotiations.

Briton Reveals Bohemia Link To Poles in '16

Lloyd George Book Out Allied Victory Assumed Tells of Paris Conflict

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 16.—Lloyd George disclosed today in his latest book, "the truth about the peace treaties," that the British foreign office drew up a memorandum in 1916 proposing Bohemia should be attached to a recreated kingdom of Poland.

The war-time British premier related the memorandum was based on the assumption of either a victory by the allied powers against Germany or a stalemate in the World War. It recommended creation of the Kingdom of Poland under a Russian grand duke.

The foreign office memorandum examined three proposals regarding Bohemia, which is now partly controlled by Czechoslovakia and partly by Germany as a result of German annexation of Sudetenland, Lloyd George said:

They were:

Formation of an independent state.

Linking Bohemia with a southern Slav state.

Adding it to the kingdom of Poland.

It further envisaged Slav provinces of Austria constituting the southern Slav state, German provinces in Austria incorporated in the German Empire, and Hungary's purely Magyar areas as an independent state.

Lloyd George outlined the sharp conflict at Versailles between himself and Woodrow Wilson on the one hand and French Premier Georges Clemenceau and French President Raymond Poincaire, on the other. The latter two wanted Germany crushed completely.

Answering a proposal submitted by French Marshal Ferdinand Foch that the Rhine should be Germany's western military frontier, Lloyd George said he warned that if Germany were treated unjustly in the peace treaties "she will find means of exacting retribution from her conquerors."

Jack Doyle, 'Irish Thrush,' Jailed for Illegal U. S. Entry

Los Angeles, Oct. 16 (AP).—Jack Doyle, the "Irish thrush," was arrested by immigration officers today as he stepped from a transcontinental plane and booked at the county jail for "illegal entry," on a telegraphic warrant from New York.

The singing prizefighter expressed bewilderment at the charges, but Albert del Guercio, immigration service counsel, said the warrant indicated Doyle was accused of falsifying information when obtaining a visa to enter the United States.

Circle Underpass

Plans of the District Commissioners to go ahead with the Thomas Circle underpass give rise to the assumption that all valid objections to this project have been overcome. If that is the case, there is certainly no reason for further delay in getting the work under way.

The recent re-examination of plans for the underpass, with the aid of the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, was a precautionary measure. The Commissioners have shown good judgment in trying to overcome every reasonable objection to the project before its construction begins. Since this is the first underground traffic tunnel of its kind planned for Washington, it is necessarily experimental. The relief of congestion at other circles will almost certainly depend upon the success of this undertaking, both from the esthetic and engineering points of view.

Presumably the plans now almost completed have the approval of the two expert bodies whose duty it is to guide the development of the Capital City. If there is any doubt as to that point, the Commissioners ought to resolve it before any step toward actual construction is taken. From the viewpoint of relieving traffic the underpass has been carefully studied over a period of years. Local officials consider it a necessity. For that very reason, however, they should make certain that it will in no way be out of harmony with carefully designed plans for development of the city as a whole.

With these precautions taken, objections to the underpass should quickly subside. Projects of this sort must be appraised from the viewpoint of the community as a whole. So long as the Commissioners cling to that attitude and make a sincere effort to eliminate any objectionable details of planning, nothing more can reasonably be asked.

Organizing For Defense

Strong opposition to plans for abolition of tax-exemption privileges is being expressed by many State and local officials. It was a foregone conclusion that a large number of States would protest against proposals to tax the income from future issues of their bonds as well as those of the Federal Government. That no doubt helps to explain why the Administration hopes to abolish tax exemption by statute instead of resorting to a constitutional amendment which would require approval of three-fourths of the States.

However, even if Congress assumes that a statutory enactment abolishing tax exemption would be upheld as constitutional, it would still find itself under tremendous pressure to reject the proposal. Already a "Conference on State Defense" has been formed, composed of the attorneys general of 39 States and other State and municipal officials, to fight abolition of tax-exemption.

Evidently these officials are not so much concerned about the legal issues involved in the proposed plan as they are about the financial effects upon State and local governments. They assert that Federal taxation of income from State and municipal bonds would "add tremendously to the burdens of local government." The comptroller of New York State, for example, predicts that the interest rate on municipal issues "might increase even as much as 2 per cent." And he estimates that the cost to New York State of its borrowing would be increased about $400,000 the first year and a similar amount each year thereafter.

State officials are also disturbed by the possibility that Congress might pass legislation taxing income from outstanding tax-exempt issues. While President Roosevelt has indicated that he does not indorse retroactive legislation of this type, the fear that Congress might be less considerate of the rights of existing bondholders is not altogether unfounded.

The attorney general of Connecticut is especially concerned with this question as his State is preparing to float a bond issue of $25,000,000. In response to inquiries he says that he would enter the courts to oppose as unjust and unconstitutional any efforts to impose a Federal income tax upon the forthcoming issues or any other outstanding bonds of Connecticut.

Of course, fair-minded advocates of abolition of tax exemption do not favor any kind of retroactive taxation of public issues. That would be, as Connecticut's attorney general points out, "a denial of elementary fair play," since the bondholders have paid for their immunity by accepting low rates of interest.

These objections to the proposed abolition of tax exemption, voiced by State officials, do not invalidate the convincing arguments in favor of equitable, nondiscriminatory taxation of all future issues of Federal, State and municipal governments. The protests of local officials do, however, suggest that the Federal Government would do well to confer with representatives of the States before taking any action. The State governments are certainly entitled to have a voice in deliberations over tax-reform plans that so vitally concern them.

WPA Spending

Continued reckless spending by the Works Progress Administration is a serious threat to the hopeful recovery movement now under way. In spite of the recent increase in employment, that agency is adding approximately $6,450,000 per day to the national debt to finance work-relief projects. Its failure to adjust its program to current changes in the economic situation makes the possibility of balancing the Federal budget still more remote. And that fact is certain to have an adverse effect upon private employment.

Congress did not prescribe rigid restrictions to govern the expenditure of the $1,425,000,000 it appropriated for the WPA last spring. At the behest of the Administration it left the rate of expenditure to the discretion of executive officials. One argument seems to have been chiefly responsible for this decision. It was said that the absence of rigid restrictions would permit the WPA to adjust its program in accord with actual needs which could not then be foreseen.

Of course, there was general hope that conditions would improve and that expenditure of this enormous sum before March 1 would not be necessary. Conditions have improved. Data assembled by the Federal Reserve Board indicate that the upturn began in May or early June and has continued every month since. But the WPA has blandly ignored that fact. It continues to spend at a rate that would be difficult to justify even in the depths of depression.

The WPA itself recently called attention to a rapid turnover among its employes. During August, for example, approximately 195,000 relief workers left the WPA. Presumably most of them were reabsorbed into private industry. Even in the face of that showing, however, the WPA further expanded relief employment.

That policy has necessitated daily spending far in excess of what appears to have been contemplated by either the President or Congress. Unless sharp curtailment is ordered soon, the WPA will be waiting at the doors of Congress on its return in January with an appeal for more money. The outlook is particularly bad because spending has reached its zenith during months of mild weather when relief needs are much less acute than in winter.

Expenditures for relief in 1933, when unemployment was more extensive than it is today, appear trivial when compared with the current outlays. Moreover, a chart prepared by the Social Security Board shows that WPA expenditures reached high peaks in 1936 and the first part of 1937 when the Administration itself was proclaiming the restoration of prosperity. Now a still higher peak has been attained, without regard for the fact that indices of economic activity have been pointing upward for five months.

In these circumstances it is not surprising that Senator Wheeler and other legislators are demanding an overhauling of the WPA. It should be obvious to any one that the Government cannot maintain such a lavish work-relief program in good as well as bad times without moving dangerously near to the brink of bankruptcy. Ultimately retrenchment will have to come. If Administrator Hopkins fails to move in that direction, Congress may decide to sweep away the whole costly structure of the WPA and substitute a relief system more in keeping with the actual needs of the unemployed and the financial resources of the Government.

Embarrassing Support

The multi-party system of government permits and sometimes necessitates temporary working agreements between hostile factions in various European countries. But in the United States, where the two-party system is still dominant, neither Democratic nor Republican candidates are accustomed to accept the support of minority groups holding views radically different from their own. To do so is to raise a presumption of sympathy for the policies of the supporting group and thus weaken a candidate's strength among his friends.

Consequently, the decision of the Communists in New York to withdraw their State ticket and urge adherents to vote for the Democratic candidates is distinctly embarrassing to Gov. Lehman and his running mate. Promptly both the Governor and Charles Poletti, the Democratic-Labor Party candidate for Lieutenant Governor, have rejected Communist offers of aid, explaining that they are profoundly opposed to the principles of the Communist Party. This repudiation is in thorough accord with the traditions of American political contests.

Whether the Communists knew that their support would be embarrassing to the Democrats, just as their denunciation is welcome to the Republicans, remains an open question. They may have deliberately chosen this devious method of throwing votes to the G. O. P. which they profess to despise. Or they may simply have failed to realize how unwelcome their attentions are to the regular candidates of the major parties. Whatever their underlying motives, these tactics give them no hope of reward for their efforts.

Apart from a little free publicity, the Communists have nothing to gain by voting for candidates who are unalterably opposed to the purposes and principles advocated by their party.

Art Takes Office

The creation of a section of fine arts as a permanent part of the Federal Government may be taken as a sign that at last America has esthetically come of age. It is an official recognition of the fact that visual beauty should be an important element in the national life. And in a country where previous official generations have left so many monuments to their want of taste, this is a significant development.

Secretary Morgenthau's order creating the new section removes the last danger that the decoration of Federal public buildings will be moved into the field of work relief or that it will revert to the field of political patronage. In other words, the policy of awarding commissions for mural paintings and sculpture wholly on a basis of merit has been vindicated and preserved.

By an executive order in 1934 the movement which had begun as the Federal works of art project was logically incorporated into the procurement division of the Treasury Department, which has charge of all the vast construction enterprises of the Government. It then became known as the "section of painting and sculpture." Since that time it has awarded contracts to more than 500 artists and has spent more than a half-million dollars, most of it for mural paintings which are now an almost inevitable feature of new public buildings.

The real achievement of the section, however, has been in bringing to light unusual talents that otherwise might have languished for years in obscurity. This was made possible by the system of competitions initiated by Edward Bruce and his associates, and under which all contracts have been awarded. The awards are made by competent juries purely on the basis of designs submitted. Not until after an award has been made is the sealed envelope which accompanies the design torn open to disclose the identity of the artist.

Under this system an artist of great reputation draws no advantage from his celebrity. Nor is it possible for the jurors to be influenced, consciously or otherwise, by prejudices or personal considerations. Thus the section of painting and sculpture has already scored a great advance over most European ministries of fine arts in which log rolling is by no means unknown.

Such has been the success of the competitive system, and so superior in some instances has been the work of a gifted unknown over that of established artists, that the method is now being adopted for many private projects. The time has vanished when a few well-known muralists could, so to speak, divide the available walls of the Nation among themselves.

Mr. Bruce and his associates may be said to have opened to promising artists a great field of opportunity that would otherwise have been closed to them. They have on the basis of merit and without any implication of alms given both employment and recognition to hundreds of gifted men and women.

More than this, they have shown to the every-day world the enormous possibilities for vital and original expression in a form of art that until lately appeared to consist of little more than a few threadbare allegories and a handful of shopworn symbols.

Nostalgic Note

From the Buffalo Evening News

In days gone by, the old kitchen range was certainly one of the most important articles of furniture in the home. It was not particularly artistic in appearance and every day or two it needed an application of elbow grease and stove polish. But the pies and cakes and roasts that came from its interior were matchless, and a steak broiled over its hot coals was something to remember. On Saturday nights, it was the central feature in the household, for the hot water for the weekly bath came from its reservoir, now a virtually unknown appurtenance; and its open oven door provided the proper air-conditioning.

The old-time range is a thing of the past, but there are still in use a number of outmoded models of this highly necessary part of a happily conducted household. In order to supply the public with the advantages of the latest types and, doubtless, to drum up trade for themselves, dealers in ranges this week are conducting an "old stove round-up" in Buffalo, by which they hope to persuade householders to replace their obsolescent cookers with modern, scientific and decorative styles. May their efforts succeed. While fond memories cling around the old family cook stove, it is as out-of-date and as inconvenient as the old oaken bucket.

Words And Deeds

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington letter of the Foreign Policy Association (October 4) concludes with these words:

"In the final hours of crisis, certain facts become self-evident:

"1. The United States did not stand aloof in the face of a major world catastrophe.

"2. The American people, while resolved not to be drawn into armed conflict in Europe, wholeheartedly supported every effort to preserve peace.

"3. The Administration refrained from making any commitment which would obligate the United States to armed intervention in case of war, but did not hesitate to invoke the moral influence of the American people on behalf of the principles of peaceful settlement."

I ask, when will Americans learn to distinguish between words and acts? When will they realize the difference between force and verbiage? A realist would amend the above statements about as follows:

In the crisis certain facts continued to be self-evident:

The United States stood firmly aloof in the face of a world catastrophe.

The American people, by their resolve to run not the minutest risk of being drawn to armed conflict in Europe, strengthened the side threatening the use of force.

The Administration gave no hint of the possibility of repealing the neutrality act so that the threatened democracies could buy airplanes here to help restore the balance disturbed by excessive German armament; instead it expressed the usual pious hopes that peace would be maintained, without caring whether it were peace with honor or with dishonor, a peace safeguarding the future interests of the United States or a peace threatening such interests. Japanese Conduct

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of September 28 there is a letter to the editor written by Edward T. Brennan, asking why the public, up to now, has failed to show any sympathy to Japan in her ruthless and inhuman invasion of China.

It fills one with amazement that anyone should be so ignorant of the nature of the American public as to think they would applaud the gangster-like acts of the Japanese. Just what does Mr. Brennan think we should feel, as we gaze at the news reels depicting the cruel destruction of the cities of China, the deaths and the pitiful sights? The natural impulses of the public are not sadistic.

Contrary to this gentleman's idea the Japanese government did send a commission to this country to try and create a favorable opinion for these blood-thirsty acts. It is a well known fact that the Japanese mind has been woefully lacking in gauging the mental reactions of other nations. They have always been imitators, not creators. This may account for their failing. Their culture they took from the Chinese and the western world. As for their conscience, how could any people do what they have done in China, and still have a shred of human feeling for others in their makeup? NATIVE CALIFORNIAN.

Married Women In Jobs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the article in The Post covering the Biggers unemployment census, just completed. I was also interested and amused by Miss Earlene White's strong protest against certain features of the census which has been submitted to the President for his review and study.

This lady, who is president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., says that the women were driven to the task of bread-winning by the depression. This is easily refuted by the fact that 4,250,000 women were employed in various fields of endeavor in 1925, eight years before the depression year of 1933.

The unemployment census reveals that 39,978,000 men and 14,496,000 women are in the labor market. If conditions in other large cities of the country are comparable with those of Washington then it is safe to say that some millions of those women would find better employment in taking care of their homes. It is a well known fact that many thousands of them here are employing women and young girls to do their housework for them. In many of these cases small children are left at home in charge of servants.

It is apparent that many women of the present era purposely seek work in shop and office to escape domestic duties. I have before me a statement, which can be verified by anyone who cares to do so, that the sum of $4,500,000 was spent in 1937 for cosmetics, including beauty parlors. This does not take into account the vast annual outlay occasioned by the rapidly changing styles of ladies' hats and other wearing apparel. Meanwhile, hundreds of thousands of deserving men are out of a job and who have dependents looking to them for support.

Is it too much to say that thousands of these women who claim they have to work for their daily bread are also evading the purposes for which nature has created them? The great decrease in the birth rate gives testimony to this.

THOMAS J. SPALDING.

Washington, Oct. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the front page of The Post, October 14, there is an article captioned "Women Have Right to Jobs, Capital Says," and on page 15, section 2, there is another article under the caption "Nation Warned It Must Afford Programs of Caring for Youth."

During the past week I have interviewed approximately 25 girls in connection with secretarial positions we have open. Out of this number there were no less than ten girls who were widows and who had one or more children to support. They have told me that they have only been able to hold temporary positions due to the fact that married women hold the better class of permanent positions.

It is my business to call primarily on workers in offices and I have observed that practically every woman working in Government offices is married. I do not believe that this is fair to those who are single, or those who are at the head of families and desperately in need. These married women with perfectly good husbands who are likewise employed, do not work because they are forced to, but do so in order to have the luxuries that their husbands' income will not permit.

In order to care for those who are worthy and desperately in need would it not be a good idea to either reduce to a minimum or give no exemption from an income tax standpoint to those couples who are both employed, or even levy an excessive tax in order to provide opportunities for the unemployed.

There is another class that should be taxed in a separate bracket and that is those bachelors and spinsters, who want all, take all and give nothing.

It would seem to me that we might be a step nearer the solution of our unemployment problem if there were fewer married women working today, and more positions available to those young men and women just leaving high school and college. PAT CLU.

A Critic Criticized

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is evident Mr. Richard Watts, jr., has missed the spirit and objective of the play in his review of Claire Boothe's delightful comedy "Kiss The Boys Goodbye" as printed in the Sunday edition of The Post.

Unfortunately Mr. Watts seems to be completely unfamiliar with the traditions and literature of the English and American theater for he makes the mistake of comparing the technic to the Russian of Chekhov rather than the distinctly Anglo-Saxon form of the comedy of manners as introduced by Etherege and perfected by Congreve and Wycherley in the late seventeenth century. Evidently Mr. Richard Watts, jr., is an exponent of that delightful Russian "My-God-What-An-Awful-World-We-Live-In" school of the theater and can see nothing amusing in the world even though it is plainly labeled "For Laughing Purposes Only."

What Mr. Watts has found wrong with Miss Boothe's play, to a measure, was the criticism of the very late drama critic Mr. Jeremy Collier, who found Wycherley too bitter and coarse in his treatment of the true-born Englishman and his remarks so offended Congreve he never wrote another play. (Today the authors continue to write but the critics in their effort to convince their employers they are critics criticize everything and keep the theater closed, so times haven't changed much.)

This seems to be the obvious criticism of the comedy of maners so I do not think Mr. Watts' criticism of Miss Boothe is valid on the grounds that she dislikes people. It is merely that she has presented the characters in unbiased and unapologetic characterizations. To present comedy one must be completely detached from the subjects in order to see the faults as values and accept them for what they assay.

The fact that "Kiss The Boys Goodbye" was well received by the audiences here in Washington indicates that the public sees the characters in the same light as Miss Boothe. If one cannot, it does not mean Miss Boothe is a misanthrope, but merely that the party of the second part has values other than those of the author.

It is unfortunate that the theater in the United States must be measured by a rule of Russian theater and the technic of the novel rather than the tradition of the English and American stage. It would be a lot better for the struggling theater if the critics would go to the theater with a sense of appreciation and that old necessity or illusion, "the willing suspension of the disbelief." "Kiss The Boys Goodbye" was never written as a work of art or a great drama of characterization, but as a comedy to amuse an audience. In that it has succeeded and Mr. Watts ought to admit it.

"Foremost Analyst"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson hit the nail on the head with sledge hammer in her magnificent answer to Edwin C. Hill's criticism of her attitude on the Czechoslovakian crisis. I particularly liked the paragraph which summarized everybody's idea of the situation in words of intense clearness and emphasis.

She said that "The horror, with which thoughtful, humane and liberally minded commentators regard what is happening over half of the Western civilized world, is the horror of realizing that in the name of peace we are establishing terror as an instrument of national and international policy!" Anything else to say about the situation would be superfluous. Let us hope that Dorothy Thompson will see fit to continue her fine work as the foremost analyst of international affairs.

Spilt Milk

SITTING cheek by jowl in the other day's newspaper were two squibs of news, one having to do with a very successful woman of the world, the other concerning what I cannot but think ar equally successful child of the world, high heartedly beginning her quest for successful womanhood.

A Philadelphia item said:

"Police today sought a 14-year-old orphan girl who disappeared from home last Thursday after taking her aunt's lipstick and high-heeled slippers. The girl, a sophomore in high school, was last seen at home studying her lessons."

An Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles read:

"Aimee Semple McPherson celebrated her forty-eighth birthday yesterday wearing a sunbonnet and red gingham gown, with a milkpail on her arm and passing out cups of milk to members of the Angelus Temple congregation. The milkmaid garb was symbolic of her girlhood days, she said."

Few makeup men (architects of the newspapers' front pages) are puckish, alas! All of them are in a hurry. So it is probable that the makeup man who put Aimee and the little runaway in adjoining columns was merely in a hurry and was not being whimsical. But he couldn't have done his job with a finer irony had he tried.

Seldom has there been shown so strikingly and graphically the wide gulf between art and artlessness. Few would deny that Aimee McPherson is, in her own metier, a remarkable artist. In the narrow field of evangelism she stands head and shoulders above her rivals. But her profession, in a more catholic sense, is the profession of the theater for she is a great show-woman. And when all the territory of the theater is taken in, she still tops her field.

I am speaking, of course, from the standpoint of popular success. What actress of the stage has, through her own professional efforts, built a theater comparable to Angelus Temple? Few of them, indeed, are even their own impressari. Offhand, I can think in our time only of Eva Le Gallienne and Miss Kitty Cornell and Miss Kitty has the good, strong right arm of her husband, Guthrie McClintock, to lean upon.

No, there is no denying that Aimee is an artist and a showwoman par excellence. Moreover, here is the spirit of the old time trouper who knew how to take it in the one-night stands and like it. In a pinch, she will take up her pulpit and walk—into the provinces. I saw her some years ago in Baltimore, standing white and as electric as a Ziegfeld priestess in a tabernacle that was hot, odorous and evangelical. If business is slack, Aimee is not above quitting the white lights to beat off kidnapers in the mesquite—or appearing with a milk pail on her arm to give cups of milk to Angelus Temple worshippers.

If you are a lump of coal at Newcastle, you have to be a pretty special lump to get anywhere in the world. Aimee's orbit is Los Angeles where the most artistic press agentry in the world is plotted by the world's most expert press agents. There dwell the Rembrandts of public relations, the Goyas of the high powered stuff. Yet I venture to say there is not one of them who would not have been proud to have sponsored the milk pail motif in Angelus Temple. The pail, the cups of milk for the devout and the milkmaids' costume, "symbolic of girlhood days," were a tour de force.

And yet—a makeup editor in a hurry struck this item beside that telling of a 14-year-old girl running away from home, and the entire milk pail edifice crumbles. It crumbles and falls apart because it is art attempting without artlessness to recapture a period of life which is essentially artless and utterly without art.

We who have scaled life's meridian look back upon the pathway up with eyes of a changed perspective. Aimee, looking backward to girlhood, sees the milkmaid's sunbonnet. But the milkmaid, who looked up to womanhood saw silk stockings, high-heeled shoes. She must have seen them or she would never have attained them.

In her milkmaid days, Aimee's mind no doubt was as busily engaged with symbolism as it is today. But it was the symbolism of the opposite pole. Her milkmaid's togs would have seemed to her then the symbol of nothing on earth, perhaps, unless it were of a routine to be fled from so soon as the cows were milked. Her symbolism of those days was fixed upon higher things—the pretty things which women wear because they have been successful as women, the pretty things which are both the cause and the effect of success. That is artlessness, such wistful wanting. Dreams like this mark the successful child of the world, because they are valid and intrepid dreams. Dreams constitute the world of the child and in the land of dreamers he who dreams the best is king!

In these days when dictators stalk and ruthless men prowl the earth, when men and women fight with their heart's blood for the security of an assured roof over their heads and three meals a day to eat, for education of a sort, a bit of culture and a little amusement, in such days as these who could dream a more glamorous or braver dream, a dream more golden and more artless, than that of a 14-year-old young woman who knows in her heart that all she need do to conquer the world is to set out from home one fine day with a pair of high-heeled slippers and a lipstick!

Outstanding Commentators On Current Events At Home And Abroad

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

AS A NEWSPAPERMAN I know that a given event, occurring under one set of circumstances and involving certain persons, may constitute news, whereas the same happening is worthless if it occurs elsewhere with other principals.

This is a very pompous way of questioning the actual importance of trivial spats between toss-pot celebrities in the night clubs. But I just want to get started. Then I can relax.

One night I happened to see a man punching another man in the face in a famous saloon, but thought nothing of it, for, after all, fights in saloons are routine and usually are very poor fights, consisting more of bad language than punching.

But the next morning this fight blossomed into news matter of first importance on the ground that Johnny Weissmuller, the greatest moving picture actor of all time, had had something to say in the preliminary wordage. Mr. Weissmuller distinctly did not punch anybody. I saw that much.

Moreover, it was a poor victory for the winner, because two waiters held the loser by his arms, trying to stop the contest to save the spectators further punishment. With this advantage the conqueror bounced lefts and rights off the man's undefended chin, but without causing his knees to sag. Indeed, the man walked briskly to his corner as the round ended.

• • • •

THIS MAY HAVE BEEN BAD publicity for Mr. Weissmuller, who was neither drunk nor disorderly, but his blameless involvement in some repartee which had preceded the slapping imparted to an unimportant flurry a quality which publicized the occurrence all over the United States, and perhaps abroad.

Even if Mr. Weissmueller had been one of the principals I still would challenge the importance of the cruel struggle, unless the other man had killed Mr. Weissmueller, whose demise, naturally, would be news. I am not indifferent to news values.

Should Mr. Weissmueller cease to be, from whatever cause, I should demand prominent play for the story under some such head as "World's Greatest Moving Picture Actor Ceases to Be." Maybe that wouldn't fit in type, but it will convey the idea. I never had any experience writing heads, being a press association man.

Fights occur every night in saloons on Third avenue, in Brooklyn, at formal dinners in Washington and in roadside jooks in the South and West, and ladies who feel themselves to have been wronged, one way or another, claw their initials in the features of faithless two-timers without the faintest ripple of publicity.

Perhaps the bartender reaches over with his gavel and pats the aggressor on the gong to bring him to his senses, or the waiters surround the contestants and give them the heave into the night, or the proprietor, preferring guile to violence, persuades the contestants to have one drink together on the house by way of pledging peace and gives them each a portion of that Mickey Finn—a saloon fighter who has yet to meet his equal.

• • • •

ANYWAY, THEY CALL names, scratch and push, and the ladies, being delicate and high-strung, sometimes shriek a few bars, but never a word of all this do we see in the papers.

At this point I remember seeing much art and reading matter a few days later concerning a spat between a theatrical lady and a foreign prize fighter which smelled of publicity from the very start, and proved to be just that on further inquiry.

This contest would have had no publicity value if the incident had been treated wisely in the first place, because, after all, we know that ladies do slap and scratch their gentlemen friends every night of the world, and there was nothing about these principals to dignify their little dispute above hundreds of others the same night. The lady was unknown from coast to coast, and the gentleman was distinguished only as the worst prize fighter ever imported from Europe, which is a very negative distinction.

Moreover, we sometimes are a little more dishonest than careless in describing the participants in the brawls in our more expensive saloons, for we often see a pub-fighter described as a society broker, well knowing him to be merely a betting commissioner for rich people too lazy to place their own bets, and thus a messenger or menial for society people, which is quite a different thing from a society broker. The term "society broker" is built up, intended to enhance the news value of very cheap saloon brawls.

I propose that if we are going to cover the subject we establish a small column under the head "Last Night's Saloon Fights," and list all the fights at all the saloons, and that anything less than a public-spirited killing be otherwise ignored.

Italian Police Jail 'Small Number' of Anti-Fascist Jews

Rome, Oct. 16 (AP).—The government tonight announced the arrest of a "small number" of Jews belonging to "anti-Fascist cells."

They were held for trial by a special tribunal created several years ago to handle such cases.

According to the official communique, Prof. Eugenio Colorni, a Trieste Jew, confessed heading the "cells." The communique said he maintained political relations with Jews both in Italy and abroad.

Other Jews arrested included a former Liberal Party deputy, Dino Philipson, of Florence, who was described in Fascist quarters as a "rich Jew connected with the Rothschild family."

Regal Rights

According to the French paper, Marie Claire, King George VI could, if he wanted to: Sell the fleet, because it belongs to him; sell the Duchy of Cornwall, which is his personal property; open the doors of every prison and set all the prisoners free; dismiss all the soldiers and sailors and send them all home; dissolve Parliament and prevent it from meeting for as long as he desired; declare war on France, but only for the purpose of regaining Brittany; preach once a year in St. David's Cathedral, of which he is canon, and from which he receives a yearly salary of 25s.

But, on the other hand, he has not the right to smoke in public, not even a cigarette.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

SNATCHED from informal conversations heard in the Wardman Park lobby as the thirtieth annual conference of the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada gets under way:

"Might not be a bad idea, providing the Government called a general holiday, if the assembly moved its sessions to the ball park so that Federal personnel, in shifts, could hear the proceedings.

"They would, in all probability, hear many of their problems discussed in such non-technical language that the problems wouldn't seem problems at all. Treated realistically—as the conference proposes to do—the problems could be quickly dissolved.

"BUT THE trouble is that the problems are handled by professional technicians and technicians must be technical. That's why, for example, the Federal personnel never have obtained a court of appeals.

"All the Government's professional technicians have involved the very idea with too many technicalities; have surrounded the notion with so much technical talk that no one, including the technicians can now unwind the fancy bundle.

"They've been talking of how to handle grievances in the field and in Washington; would the court be a roving body? who would pay for it? who would sit on it? how could the element of reprisal be kept out? . . . They've talked and talked up a thousand trees, 'round a thousand enlarging circles.

"AND THE solution—if the problem is looked at realistically—is simply this: Select the supervisors with greater care; choose the chiefs and bosses on the simple basis of their qualification to handle the work, as importantly, to get along with the personnel.

"If this were done in the future—and certain overhaulings made to correct the mistakes of appointment in the past, the chances are that the personnel wouldn't need any court of appeals because the numbers of complaints would be negligible.

"It has worked out that way in the Tennessee Valley Authority. There the appointment of supervisors has been made with a fine tooth comb. They have recognized that supervisors can be obtained who will keep the peace with their subordinates—and it has been discovered that the peace can be kept and the work performed completely at the same time.

"SOME OF this line of reasoning may come out Thursday afternoon when Gordon R. Clapp, TVA personnel directors, heads a panel on the theme of grievances and complaints.

"Also, there will be discussed, at one session or another, the projected issue of allowing the United States Civil Service Commission to handle examinations for county, city and State civil service groups. And the matter of in-service training, wherein the Federal Government lags like a runner with a sore ankle.

"In this connection, private industry is far ahead, because it has recognized that if it trains its employes in their particular duties the good old work will be expedited to the interest of the good old company.

"THE FEDERAL Government has lagged, but it shouldn't now with the plain authority for a program of in-service training that has come in the recent executive orders.

"Louis Brownlow comes in Tuesday and certainly should have some interesting reflections, since so many of his own recommendations went in the reorganization bill which, in turn, went into the discard. No doubt he will have some ideas for a n reorganization measure, and if he is wise, the emphasis will be on taking the proposals singly and not in lump to the Congress.

"And the effects of the executive orders may be ironed down to a crease where all those, who have wandered in the dark, can know the exact direction. Beyond this, the distinguished and realistic delegates are planning to have a good time with their hosts, the Civil Service Commission, the Society for Personnel Administration and local people otherwise."

New Arts Section To Supervise Federal Buildings

Creation of a section of fine arts in the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department to take over decoration of all Federal buildings was announced by Secretary Morgenthau yesterday.

The section will replace the old section of painting and sculpture of the Procurement Division.

Creation of the section is "evidence of belief of both the Secretary and Director C. J. Peoples, of the Procurement Division, that work pursued and methods employed by the section have made so substantial a contribution to development of native art that they constitute a sound basis for permanent Government activity in this field."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Discovered At Last!

("The town of Brigue, Switzerland, has awarded its most treasured award, the Honor Citizenship, to Dr. Ernest Guglielminetti, a country doctor who invented the tarred road. His idea of tarring roads to keep down dust was first tried out at Monte Carlo in 1902." —News item.)

"Well," declared Elmer Twitchell today, "all my motoring life I have been wondering who was responsible for those tarred roads.

"It seems to me that two-thirds of my life during the summer months has been spent going over the car with kerosene rags, chisels, putty knives and turpentine trying to get the tar off."

Mr. Twitchell was in quite a temper. "For years I have been wondering where the idea of smearing tar all over the roads originated and I didn't think it possible that one brain could have produced such an annoyance to motorists. I certainly never thought the guilty party would ever admit it.

"As a matter of fact the newspaper item don't say the doctor has confessed. It just says that the town has honored him for it and if I was the doctor I would come out and deny that I had anything to do with it. I would proclaim my innocence.

"Imagine honoring the bird who started this whole business of soaking the country roads with oil and tar. What kind of a place is Brigue, anyhow?

"Of course it is just possible that over in Europe they use a little sense in sprinkling this tar on the roads. Maybe they don't put any more on a road than is needed to lay the dust. But over in the United States—what a difference. Why, they just pour it all over the road like it was water.

"You can't tell me it ain't a racket. In every community there is some guy who has a lot of tar and oil on his hands and he always seems to have the right political connections. The boys in power must just appropriate the dough and tell them to go out over the dirt roads and not spare the sprinklers. In hundreds of communities the racket has been developed to a point where they just keep on oiling 'em all summer.

"This Swiss doctor may have had a good idea within limits but I don't think he ever imagined how far it would be carried by American politicians.

"I've solved the problem somewhat. I now buy only a black auto and before it leaves the show window I have the agent daub the bumpers and tires. Then I don't notice it," concluded Elmer.

"I rented seven rooms to a widow and kept two for myself. The woman is a perfect lady, though a Republican."

The Case Of Cardinal Innitzer

THE CASE OF THEODORE Cardinal Innitzer is of the greatest significance, because of its sensational aspects, and the political background of the cardinal make clear what is the essential struggle in the Third Reich.

As a citizen, Cardinal Innitzer was National Socialist. He went so far as to advise his flock to vote for union with Germany in the plebiscite which ratified the fait accompli of the German conquest of Austria, secured, as was the conquest of Czechoslovakia, by the threat of invasion.

He told his people that one could not disregard ties of blood. He has, therefore, shown himself clearly willing to render unto Caesar, and in full, the things that are Caesar's.

But the modern Caesars recognize no limitations whatsoever to any renderings, whether of the human body, soul or spirit. National Socialism, like Communism, is a secular religion. Unless these two movements are thus understood, nothing about them is understood. The first tenet of both of them is a demand for the breaking of the First Commandment: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

And this is why the most formidable opposition to both Communism and National Socialism inside and outside the countries that they rule today comes from the religious.

• • • •

IT MAY BE POSSIBLE to harmonize Communism or National Socialism with some intellectually supportable view of economics, or forms of state administration and structure, or system of social organization.

It is absolutely impossible to harmonize either of them with either the Old Testament or the New.

In Germany, members of every previous political credo have thrown in their lot with the Nazis without any serious inner struggle. But the Christian church, and with it millions of Christians, maintains an obduracy which neither terror nor self-interest, nor offers of superficial compromise have been able to break.

To others, some of the teachings of Nazism may be silly or fanatical, or transitory phenomena to be treated lightly. But to the Christian conscience they are sinful. And that the conviction of sin has not disappeared from a largely agnostic world is testified to by the most heroic struggle going on, not against Caesar but for God.

Is it not important that the leader of the German confessional church, Pastor Niemoeller, and the prince of the Catholic Church in Vienna, Cardinal Innitzer, were both, at the outset, friendly to the political and economic ideas of National Socialism and have become its most intractable enemies?

• • • •

THE ATTITUDE of Stalin, and before him Lenin, to Christianity and the attitude of Hitler are very different. Communism is an open foe of Christianity. Time and again Lenin in his writings has emphasized that Marxianism is incompatible with Christianity.

In Russia a prodigious propaganda against religion goes on unceasingly. All churchgoers are ousted from administrative posts, and from the teaching profession. No party member may be a church member. The church has been virulently and terroristically persecuted.

On the other hand, Russian communism makes no attempt to corrupt the church. Early in the Soviet regime there was a movement to establish what was called "The Living Church." It held a congress in Moscow in 1922, but the whole idea was later abandoned.

Lenin regarded the Church as a superstition and an instrument of the owning classes, and believed that Communism and rationalism would destroy it, of themselves. Neither he nor any of his followers have ever tried to hang the Hammer and Sickle above the altar. And the Church in Russia survives, in an amazing fashion, on the search of the "freed" masses after the comforts of the Christian faith.

• • • •

HITLER IS NOT A rationalist. He has called himself an "inspired somnambulist," and he is full of intuition and a certain susceptibility to mysticism.

He was born a Catholic, but he is neither Catholic nor Christian, and once, in a moment of intimacy, confessed to an acquaintance of mine, "I am all pagan."

Nevertheless, National Socialism asserts the existence of God, and Hitler believes that the belief in God is a force which can be exploited by Nazism. He has a strong sense of the dark emotional forces in men—if he has ever read the late D. H. Lawrence he will have understood him thoroughly.

It is the sense of these forces which makes him a far greater demagogue than Lenin ever was, which makes National Socialism far more dangerous movement than Communism ever was, and which makes Hitler anxious not to destroy religion but to capture it. He does put the swastika above the altar. And he therefore is the more dangerous enemy of Christianity and of all religion. God is useful, if he is subordinated to the Nazi's own secular religion of race and nationhood. Hitler does not accept the sovereignty of God, never could a Nazi national hymn end with the words, "Protect us by thy might, great God, our King."

The ethos of Nazism is in itself, not in any other conception whatsoever. And that self is consciously amoral. Its strength is founded on armed idolatry, and though Hitler wants to make his people "prosperous, free and strong," there is not in a single one of his published speeches the slightest indication that he wants to make them righteous.

• • • •

THOSE WHO HAVE made the deepest, most careful studies of National Socialism are aware that it is here that National Socialism is most intransigently at war with Western civilization, which is founded on Judaeo-Greek-Roman and Christian culture.*

Hitler likes to compare himself to Cromwell. But it is a mistake to consider the analogy for an instant. Cromwell was a passionate Christian whose last prayer was "Make the name of Christ glorious in the world!" Hitler seeks to capitalize, against the Catholic Church, the anticlerical feeling, and the old movement to cut the Church loose from Rome, but his attitude toward the Protestants, who did that after Luther, and who, in Germany have been a truly national church, reveals that his hostility is not toward the form of church organization but to Christianity as such. He wishes none of the brakes, implicit in the Christian conception, to be exercised over his totalitarian herd.

• • • •

TWO GREAT POETS, decades before the outbreak of the Russian and Nazi revolutions, prophesied them and their effects on the whole Christian structure of ethics and morality.

What Dostoevsky did for the Russians in "The Possessed" Heine did in a monograph on Germany over a hundred years ago.

"It is the greatest merit of Christianity," he writes, "to have assuaged the joy of the German in brutal bellicosity, but . . . when, one day, the Cross of Christ is broken the savagery of the old warriors, the wild Berserker wrath, will break forth anew in all the barbaric fury of which our Nordic poets tell in song and saga. Even today the talisman of Christianity has begun to rot, and the day will come when its power will piteously collapse. Then will the old stone gods arise from the accumulated rubbish of the past . . . When hat day comes . . . take good care, Frenchmen, and do not interfere with those affairs which we are settling among ourselves. Take care neither to fan the fire nor quench it . . . Do not laugh at my advice . . . German thunder is admittedly German; it is not very agile . . . but it will come one day and . . . you will hear an explosion such as has never yet occurred in the history of the world.

"The hour will come, when, like spectators in an amphitheater, the nations will crowd around Germany to watch the great tourney. I warn you, Frenchmen, keep quiet, and above all do not applaud . . . Take care! I wish you well, and for that reason I tell you bitter truths . . . You have more to fear from a liberated Germany than from the entire Holy Alliance, with all its Croats and Cossaks . . . Never disarm . . ."

Heine's admonitions to Western civilization need to be heeded today by this country as well as the French. "Do not interfere . . . Never disarm." . . .

*For instance, F. A. Voigt, diplomatic correspondent of "The Manchester Guardian," for many years its correspondent in Berlin, who has complete a knowledge of post-war Germany as any English-speaking man alive, and whose book "Unto Caesar" has been previously quoted in this column.

Nature Walks Planned In Aquatic Lily Gardens

Nature walks through the W. B. Shaw Aquatic Lily Gardens, recently acquired for the District park system, will begin at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday and 2:30 p. m. Saturday, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, announced yesterday.

The gardens are across the Anacostia River from the National Training School for Boys, near Kenilworth avenue and Douglas street northeast.

Morgenthau Great Dane Still Hunted by Police

Dano, the great dane pet of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, was still missing last night despite extensive police search.

The dog, weighing nearly 200 pounds, vanished from the Morgenthau home, 2211 Thirtieth street northwest, Saturday afternoon. A lookout was sent by police then and yesterday the dog's description was broadcast.

Ickes Denies Canceling Talks

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 16.—Secretary Ickes today denied rumors about what happened to his Nevada itinerary, said he had canceled no speaking engagements and emphasized that he would be in Los Angeles Wednesday night to discuss democracy and dictatorship.

Although the Cabinet officer's far west schedule originally called for stops at Boulder City, Nev., yesterday and at Riverside, Calif., today, he came to San Francisco yesterday morning and remained over the Sabbath.

Ickes said he did not go from Reno to Boulder City as originally expected "simply because I preferred a few days in California to long automobile rides in a hot climate."

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Two Loves

ELIZABETH MADOX ROBERTS writes a lovely prose which sometimes walks, sometimes skips, and often sings, as the turns of her story require; and that prose, with its faintly archaic quality, suggestive at once of Kentucky's back roads and of old English songs, is the chief distinction of her new novel, "Black Is My Truelove's Hair" (Viking $2.50).

The story is of Dena Janes, who appears at the start, tattered and torn, and with a black mark, as of a man's hand, on her neck, as she turns off the concrete onto the dirt road, fingering her rosary and talking to herself . . . "There's no rights or wrongs to anything . . . I have got a right to live . . . Only God or some of the saints can end it . . . A right to be in some way that makes good sense . . . A name for yourself, your own name that you were born with, or his name when you marry."

SHE HAD walked a far piece that night; and all the people of the Glen were at their windows to watch Dena Janes come home, she who had ridden away on Black Bill Langtry's big white truck, and come back so soon, with no ring on her finger. But it was only to Nat Journeyman, who made the boys and girls free of his great shadowed orchard, that Dena ever talked.

"I hate Bill now," she told Nat. "But what he was before this. That's another kind. I said to him, then, "I'll go wherever you go and be with you my whole endurен hereafter." I says to him, 'I want to be your woman and to love you forever and all I want is to guard you and keep you,' and I says it is all I would want in life, just to be with him. It was true, and I couldn't see any other way in life." If a bird sang on a limb outside the window, she had thought of Bill; as she combed out her own long hair, it was all for Bill. But now she remembered the gun in his hand and his other hand at her throat, and his threat to kill her if she ever left him, and the strange figure on his breast, which Nat Journeyman told her was the phallic emblem of life, old as art itself, but when tattooed on the breast of man, the emblem of death.

So Dena lived her way back into her village, alone and frightened, even when a new and different love came to her, a love less suddenly compelling, fearsomely like a delicate bubble that might break in the air, dissolve in the wind, leaving Dena uncertain which was dream, the past or the present.

THERE WAS a gas pump in that village; there were concrete roads. Miss Roberts manages deftly the balance between the world of gasoline and the legendary eternal world in which Dena also moved. Her village is lovely and it is real, even the sound on the hilside which might be owl. But I suspect that in her own mind it has symbolic overtones which do not quite carry across to the reader. That symbol on Langtry's breast; Dena's shriving at the church, which seems somehow to have deflected Langtry's gun when, in the dark night of Journeyman's orchard, he finally shot at Dena; these must, to Miss Roberts, have carried a load of meaning which they did not convey to me, so that for all the texture of the prose the story left me with a sense of disappointment and frustration. It may be otherwise for readers with more mystic minds.

Plan Aids Living Craftsmen

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT has just issued what must be its most lyrical press release since the mimeographed biography of Andrew W. Mellon which was made available to correspondents during his years as lord of the Federal finances. The only connection between the late Mr. Mellon and the current Treasury press release is indirect and accidental, but possibly symbolic. It is an interest in art. Mr. Mellon's interest expressed itself in the expenditure of many millions of dollars of his personal fortune on the grand collection of masterpieces, mostly of dead foreign artists, which he gave to the Federal Government, together with the funds for a museum to house it. The Treasury's interest is in live American artists.

The creation, by Secretary Morgenthau, of a permanent section of fine arts puts on a more secure basis one of the most successful minor experiments of the New Deal. For four years now the Federal Government has been earmarking for decoration about 1 per cent of the cost of each Federal building. This money has been used to pay for mural paintings and sculptures by American artists, chosen through anonymous competitions. As a result several hundred postoffices and other Federal buildings throughout the country are embellished by the hands of the more talented American painters ad sculptors, instead of with the gilt and gewgaws of other days, and the new Postoffice and Justice buildings in Washington are museums of contemporary art.

AMONG PERSONS WHO have kept an eye on this development there probably will be no dissent from the declaration, approved by Mr. Morgenthau, that "the results achieved are remarkable" and that "painters and sculptors of established position have outdone themselves in this work and many distinguished talents hitherto unknown to the public have been brought out by our system of anonymous competitions."

The author of this program is Edward Bruce, one of the many men of imagination and varied talents for whom the New Deal has been a magnet. Mr. Bruce had been an All-American football player, and a successful lawyer and businessman before he decided, about 15 years ago, to devote himself to his hobby, and soon won international recognition as a painter. In the early days of the Roosevelt Administration, Mr. Bruce came to Washington with a commission to represent Philippine sugar interests. He was fully aware that the drying up of private patronage during the depression had left many good artists very near the breadline. He had faith in the native American art, which had begun to flower, some ideas about the duty of the Government to foster the cultural life of the people, and a presentment that the era of great personal fortunes was nearing its close. When Mr. Bruce learned that the Roosevelt Administration was going to spend a large amount of money in providing work for the unemployed, it occurred to him that it would be more valuable all-around to employ needy artists in embellishing public buildings than in cutting down trees or laying sewer pipe.

MR. BRUCE'S IDEA was promptly approved by officials in the Treasury, Harry Hopkins, Rexford G. Tugwell, and a few other New Dealers to whom he imparted it. The result was the Public Works of Art Project, which put 2,500 artists to work during the first six months of 1934. That came to an end with the liquidation of the Civil Works Administration. But an exhibition of the best work done under that project created a sensation in Washington and prompted the President to approve Mr. Bruce's suggestion that 1 per cent of the cost of each Federal building be allotted to artistic embellishment. Mr. Bruce thereupon became chief of a newly created section of painting and sculpture in the Treasury Department, which now, on its fourth anniversary, has been made permament under a revised name.

Through a nation-wide network of committees of art experts, Mr. Bruce has directed probably the greatest series of competitions among artists any nation has ever held. Some have been State-wide, some regional, and a few have been national—depending on the size and importance of the job. Ninety-six have been held or are under way. The runners-up are commissioned to do somewhat smaller jobs without further competitions. Altogether approximately 4,800 artists have competed. And from these approximately 500 have been awarded contracts. In some cases the competing artists have been allowed to elect their own juries. In all, the juries reach their decision without knowing which artists presented which design.

TO SOME ARDENT budget-balancer this Federal subsidy to native American art may sound like a waste of money. The fact seems to be that it costs no more—and perhaps less—than the method of embellishing public buildings that was in vogue until four years ago. Under the old method, sculptors, and occasionally painters, were employed without competition, usually on the recommendation of the architect, and the fees were higher. Mural painters received as much as $40 and $50 per square foot, whereas under the new dispensation the highest price paid is $20 and the average is $14. In fact, some of the persons connected with the Treasury's art program feel a trifle guilty about the low prices they are fixing in many instances in their efforts to get as much art as possible for their money.

An expedition to the Procurement Division of the Treasury, where copies of prize-winning designs may be seen, is recommended as a tonic for anyone who fears that American culture is languishing or being regimented.

Gila Cliff Dwellings Fail as Lure for U. S. Tourists

The Gila Cliff Dwellings in New Mexico, one of 26 national monuments comprising the Southwestern National Monuments, attracted only 105 visitors in the year ended September 30, but the other 25 set a new high, the Interior Department announced yesterday.

Visitors to the monuments totaled 319,164 for the year, an increase of 27,738 over last year. The White Sands monument in New Mexico attracted 110,805 tourists.

O. E. S. Plans Dance

Two astro-analysts will give character readings and witches will ride on broomsticks Saturday night at the benefit Halloween party and dance to be given by the Harmony Chapter No. 40, O. E. S., at the Joppa Lodge Temple, 4209 Ninth street northwest.

Veterans' Work To Be Pictured In Exhibit Here

With special lighting equipment, sound pictures and intricate electric devices, the Veterans' Administration is going to put out a tabloid display for the public today showing how it carries out its Nationwide activities.

The exhibit will be opened to the public in Room 121 of the Administration's building, Vermont avenue and H street northwest. Balopticon slides, display plaques, paintings, maps and dioramic projections will be used to tell the story of the Administration's services.

Scenes of the World War, hospital scenes and charts giving statistical information will be shown. Designed by J. F. Beattie, of the Veterans' Administration, the exhibit will be a permanent display for use later at medical and hospital society meetings.

Senator Bulkley Booed in Ohio Debate With Taft

Ohio Gives Taft a Chance Over Bulkley

party's senatorial nominee, is staking all on a New Deal backsweep, and if he wins there will be no mistaking what the issues were.

Taft Dodges Roosevelt

His oral haymakers dodge the President personally, but swing heavily at nearly every Administration measure he stands for. Foremost of these is the AAA farm control program now at a new peak of unpopularity in Ohio. The farm vote is nearly half of the total State count, and Taft is claiming 60 per cent of it. He is framing a farm program of his own.

His plump, plugging adversary, Senator Bulkley, provided the sounding board he wanted when he agreed to meet Taft in open debate.

Bulkley may look like the underdog in the "Lincoln-Douglas" oratorical jousts, but he is conducting a hard, methodical campaign that may be under-rated by his opponents. He doesn't attempt to defend all New Deal laws, much less those in farm disfavor, but he goes down the line at each stand for the President, whose indorsement he carries.

As his fluent opponent hammers relentlessly at "Federal spending," Bulkley just as emphatically defends it, and he is counting on the "lower third" of the voters, benefiting from relief measures, to see him through.

G. O. P. Concedes Cleveland

That Cleveland and the Cuyahoga County vote will swing to Bulkley, most Republican leaders privately concede. That county casts the heaviest relief vote and it should go predominantly Democratic. Bulkley's managers insist he will poll in addition a sufficiently bulky industrial and rural count in the rest of the State to win by a safe margin.

A puzzle to the dope peddlers is the faction-torn governorship race and its possible effects on the Senatorial contest. And a political "lame duck," Gov. Martin L. Davey, holds the key to that enigma if not to the success of the entire Democratic ticket.

That Gov. Davey is not going to turn a hand for Charles Sawyer, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, is now apparent. That he would go so far as openly to support John W. Bricker, Republican nominee for Governor, is generally questioned. Ohio papers gave wide play to a Washington column charging Davey made a "deal" with Bricker on State jobs, and Democratic candidates plan to use it in the campaign as an exposure "break" for which Sawyer was waiting.

Employes Fear for Jobs

Davey, in New Deal disfavor, and defeated by Sawyer in the gubernatorial primaries, still has three months to serve. He and Sawyer are said to have "feuded" since their school days at Oberlin, and the break is wide open now. The Governor refused to attend the State Democratic Convention (he was invited only 24 hours in advance). He "ordered" State employes to stay away too.

Whatever else it may have done, Davey's feud has deterred many State employes from getting out and working for the Democratic ticket, and Sawyer is the chief sufferer there. State payrollers frankly fear for their jobs if they do.

Some Republican spokesmen say they hope neither Davey nor Bricker denies the "job deal" charges. Whether or no there was such an agreement these G. O. P. strategists say State jobholders might show their gratitude for a promise of retention in office under a Republican Governor.

Davey Wants 1940 Control

Ambitious despite his primary licking, Davey is said still to have his eye on control of the Ohio delegation to the 1940 Democratic Convention and that ambition operated against Administration aid for him in the primaries. If Sawyer is defeated in November, Davey would be in a position to make a fight for delegation control.

One aftermath of the feud is bitter Democratic factional fighting in Cuyahoga County, which swung the nomination for Sawyer in the primaries. The so-called Miller faction in the county, which worked for Davey in the primaries, is demanding that Sawyer abandon the Congwer clique, which supported the nominee. Sawyer is trying to remain out of the quarrel and retain the support of both factions, which is delicate business.

Davey before the primaries was the instigator of other issues that now are being capitalized by the Republican candidates.

Farmers Hostile to C. I. O.

The Governor's war with the C. I. O. has aided in spreading hostility to that labor group in rural areas which the Republicans hope to cash in on in November. The State C. I. O. has indorsed the Democratic nominee for Governor. So did President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, but Green failed to swing the State federation in line, and some State Federation leaders are supporting the Republican candidate.

Best evidence of the apparent Republican trend in Ohio can be found in the sharp contests in several Congressional districts. The sole surviving Republican members of the House delegation, Representatives Jenkins and White, appear certain of return. Three other traditional Republican districts, now represented in the House by Democrats, seem most likely to return to the fold.

Democratic incumbents definitely threatened with defeat in November are Representatives Fleger, Dixon and Aleshire. Former Representative Chester C. Bolton, who once headed the Republican Congressional campaign commitee, is the favorite this time against Fleger. Charles H. Elston, Republican, appears leading Dixon in the old Nick Longworth district, while Aleshire is threatened in the old Simeon D. Fess district by Clarence J. Brown, Republican.

Republicans also claim they have bright hopes in the Second District, where former Representative Hess is besieging the Democratic incumbent, Bigelow; in the Fifteenth District, where P. W. Griffiths is making things hot for Representative Secrest; and in the Ninth, where Representative Hunter is opposed by Homer A. Ramey, Republican.

There still are other districts in which Democratic members who looked forward to no trouble will be glad to slip by this time with narrow margins.

Surest of election of the sitting Democrats would seem to be Arthur P. Lamneck, who battled the Administration at every turn, and Robert Crosser, House champion of railroad labor.

Eucharistic Congress to Open Today

Eucharist

Mardi Gras festivals, for which it is famous.

Every avenue has been decorated for the occasion with the many flags under which New Orleans has lived. From palm trees in the esplanades, from lamp posts and many a doorway there also fluttered the gold and white papal colors and the emblem of the congress, which bears along with religious symbols, the pelican of New Orleans and the fleur-de-lis of royalist France, which brought the cross to this community more than two centuries ago.

The handsome lamp posts in Canal Street, the widest and most celebrated of the city's traffic arteries, have all been converted into palm trees. Living fronds were placed in their natural forms about the lamps, while the iron posts were covered with rough brownish material to simulate the trunks of palm trees. The effect, particularly by night, is one of the striking beauty.

Temporary Altars Set Up

Preceding Cardinal Mundelein—the only American cardinal who is to attend—most of the other members of the hierarchy had arrived here before sunset this evening. For the convenience of the archbishops and some of the bishops in attendance, more than 50 altars were placed in rooms on three floors of the Hotel Roosevelt. Twice as many more altars were placed in the upper floor of the Municipal Auditorium, where, this morning, hundreds of visiting priests celebrated their Sunday masses.

In homes all over the city little boys who serve as acolytes were roused from sleep long before dawn to serve at the early morning masses. Their assignments, like hundreds of other details thoroughly planned in advance, worked with precision and decorum.

Apostolic Delegate Attends

Civic and religious officials of Louisiana will meet Cardinal Legate Mundelein when he arrives here at noon tomorrow. From the station a procession of clergy and laity will escort him to St. Louis Cathedral for a liturgical reception in which the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cocognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will participate. After kissing the altar, Cardinal Mundelein will sing the prayer of St. Louis, the King of France who led the Seventh Crusade, and for whom this city named its first place of worship 220 years ago.

Public Ceremony Tonight

In tomorrow's ceremony at St. Louis Cathedral, towering above Jackson Square, welcome will be extended to the cardinal legate by the archbishop of New Orleans, the Most Rev. Joseph Francis Rummel, S. T. D. Since the seating capacity of the cathedral can care for only a fraction of the congress visitors, the first large public ceremony will wait until evening when a civic reception is to be tendered to Cardinal Mundelein at the Municipal Auditorium.

On that occasion, and subsequent parts of the program, President Roosevelt will be represented by Postmaster General Farley. Among other visitors prominent in politics will be Mayor Kelly of Chicago.

Women Contribute

For the pontifical masses in City Park Stadium, a great ostensorium, or monstrance, weighing 26 pounds, constructed of solid gold and blazing with 817 diamonds and 90 other precious stones, was especially designed and constructed. The metal and the jewels were contributed by devout women of New Orleans, an estimate of $100,000 being made as the replacement value of their gifts.

In its design this sacred vessel, constructed of seven rays to form the gloria, tells the story of Catholicism in this city. Its shields bear the coats of arms of the 12 nations that sent the early priests in Louisiana.

In gold bas-relief is represented the first Eucharistic procession held in New Orelans, in 1734, when the Ursuline nuns moved from the temporary quarters they had established upon their arrival in 1727, to their permanent convent. The Sieur de Bienville, founder of the city, headed that procession.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

Lounge Riviera, that section of Cannes being installed at 2400 Sixteenth street, will open on the eve of Armistice Day, November 11, we hear from 2400's manager, Fordyce Minnick. Music will be by the accomplished Three Dees, who play 14 instruments. There'll probably be a trio of girl warblers, too.

Cafe Caprice will probably open Thursday, says Manager Daniel Wathey, of the Roger Smith Powhatan, who also promises, with a smile in his voice, that Caprice murals will shock you—mildly.

On with the "Great Waltz" in Shoreham's Blue Room tonight! And may the best five teams win. For they will whirl in waltz finals for this territory to be held at the Capitol Theater on October 24 and may also dance in the New York finals on December 14 when M-G-M's "The Great Waltz" is released.

The Blue Room's new show tonight will star Elizabeth Houston and Dan Harden in travesties of old and new dances, also White and Manning, whose comedy stepping you should remember from their Ziegfeld days.

Camera! Soft Lights!

At Heigh-Ho: Walter Hagen, the great golfer, teeing off with a Scotch and soda; Movie Director Frank Capra, very informal (he won't be bothered with white ties or even black ties); "Missy" Le Hand, the President's secretary, in mauve chiffon, squired by Raymond Cahill, of the Federal Housing Commission; the jolly family party tossed for Tom O'Callahan in celebration of his getting that law degree from Georgetown after a summer of hard work; oodles of people coming in from that "champagne and orchids" party in the Mayflower Lounge—orchid wearers including blonde Kitty Fuqua in black taffeta, magnetic Bambi McKenna.

In the Pall Mall Room: Representative G. Buell Snyder renewing friendship with Dancers Castaine and Barry. It seems that for two years Pauline Barry won the Snyder Cup for dramatic interpretation.

In the Mayflower Lounge: Kurt Weill enjoying his own "Knickerbocker Holiday" music in company with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Huston. Produced Dwight Wyman and Director Josh Logan.

Now you tell one: Sande Williams (Shar-Zad) was given his choice between a bike and violin on his eleventh birthday—and took the violin. The neighborhood kids figured that Sande was a little batty. But at 16 he gave his first recital in the Pittsburgh Musical Institute.

Charley Yukel, trumpeter with Johnny Slaughter's Metronome Room Orchestra, and also first trumpter with the Washington Symphony, has his own music school. He was graduated in violin from Peabody Conservatory, but prefers the trumpet.

Mayflower Lounge has a new canary. She's Connie Gates from Manhattan and she plays a baby piano, too. She'll appear every eve, probably at cocktail sessions also.

Gustatory Treats:

Picata Civiasco, a Madrillon specialty. It's a dish of the high Piedmont, compounded tastily of veal and pork cutlets, spinach and fresh mashroom sauce.

Philadelphia pepper pot soup as made by Hour Glass' Philadelphia chef, Hans Lube.

Troika's flaming beef, Stroganoff. It's really flaming like a torch when they bring it to the table.

Advance: Those "midnight snacks" shortly to be served by Hi Hat's new chef, Emil Croci. There'll be a different and special snack every night.

Lotus will continue Earl Lindsay's Fantasies through this week. Acts will be changed. But there will be the same big and gorgeous show, the same superlative performers, headed by Loyce Grahame and the Chadwicks.

Mayfair's psychiatrist, Countess de Bournet, cannot wear a wrist watch. Why? Because she has so much electricity in her system that it stops the watch.

Matt Windsor, Anchor Room's gifted accordionist, has played at the White House several times, once at a dinner party for John Roosevelt and his wife, who was then Anne Clark, again for the White House press party of last season. Matt played gypsy music for the family party, and Virginia reels at the press party.

Bamboo Gardens will start its new show next Thursday. This means just three days more to see those Chinese dancing and singing dolls, the Kim Loo Sisters.

Special-Special. Pine Grove is going to toss a barn dance that is a barn dance next Friday, October 21. There'll be live horses, cows and chickens right in the Pine Grove ballroom. Corn husk decorations will bank the inside and outside walls of the spot.

Brinkley's has a new singer. He's Arthur Amorosi, one of Washington's smarter vocalizers, versatile in his delivery of both sweet and swingaroo numbers.

LYDE SWYGERT,

Child, 2, Trampled By Blind Horse, Dies

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 16.—Mary Catharine Miller, 2, died today in the Warner Hospital here of a ruptured spleen and internal injuries after a blind horse had trampled her at the Miller home near Aspers last night.

The 1,500-pound animal ran against a clothes line, knocked over the child and stepped on her abdomen with a hind foot.

Fort Myer Set Fetes Newlyweds, Holds Tea

Hinceses Get Reception Ridden on Caisson Band Plays for Them

By Elizabeth Henney.

YESTERDAY afternoon was a gay one for Army officers and their wives stationed in or about Washington. At Fort Myer there was a picturesque welcoming staged in post tradition for Lieut. Charles Hines and his bride, the former Miss Betty Balsley. Later members of various infantry regiments met, several hundred strong, at the Army and Navy Country Club for their annual tea.

Lieut. and Mrs. Hines were met near the headquarters of Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, by a red and white caisson drawn by eight white horses. The newlyweds, who only recently returned from their honeymoon, were drawn triumphantly all around the post while a band played everything from wedding marches to the old Army song "The Caissons Go Rolling Along." For many years brides have been welcomed thus into the Field Artillery when they come to an Army post to make their home.

Tea Follows Caisson Ride

As though this weren't enough for one day, Lieut. and Mrs. Hines were later honored at a tea given by Maj. David Rumbough. His sister, Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, wife of Capt. Donaldson, of Fort Myer, acted as hostess.

The guest of honor wore a becoming teal blue woolen suit with a Tyrolean hat, a corsage of orchids, and black accessories. Mrs. Donaldson had chosen a black frock with white ruching around the collars and cuffs.

Among the guests were Mrs. John Crane, wife of Col. Crane, who is out of town for several days; Commander and Mrs. A. H. B. Balsley, parents of the bride; the commandant of the post, Col. Jonathan Wainwright, who becomes brigadier general November 1, with Mrs. Wainwright; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Herr with their daughter, Miss Fay Herr; Col. and Mrs. John Millikin; Capt. and Mrs. William Lee—the former is aide to Gen. Craig; Col. and Mrs. Albert Kenner; Col. and Mrs. Charles G. Mortimer and Capt. and Mrs. Leslie Carter.

Toasts to the bride by Maj. Rumbough and other members of the post added to the gayety.

Many Generals At Infantry Tea

High-ranking officers by the dozen attended the tea given by members of the Infantry yesterday. We saw in 10 minutes' time Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Walter L. Reed, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. F. W. Coleman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. D. B. Rosenbaum, Brig. Gen. Charles Roberts, retired, and Mrs. Roberts, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. F. W. Boschen, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Blanding, Brig. Gen. Lorenzo Gasser and Brig. Gen. Walter Kruger, commandant at Fort Meade, and Mrs. Kruger.

Receiving were Gen. and Mrs. George A. Lynch and Col. and Mrs. James B. Woolnough, with Lieut. Col. Levan C. Allen and Col. William Livesay beside them making introductions. Mrs. Lynch wore a long gown of Burgundy red velvet and a corsage of gardenias, and Mrs. Woolnough was in black with two large rhinestone clips.

Chrisanthemums were everywhere, and new style notes among the women present emphasized velvet dresses trimmed with Irish lace and tiny hats covered with feathers.

Taking turns at the tea table were a group of wives of Army officers, including Mrs. Lloyd Freedendall, Mrs. Rapp Brush, Mrs. Oscar Griswold, Mrs. Levan Allen, Mrs. Henry J. Matchett and Mrs. Livesay.

Other guests were Col. and Mrs. Royden Beebe, Col. and Mrs. Rufus Bratton, Col. Raymond W. Hardenburgh, Miss Jane Maverick, Lieut. John D. Lawler, Lieut. Thaddeus Dulin and Capt. and Mrs. William H. Maglin.

Officers came all the way from posts in Maryland and Virginia to attend the party.

Dr. de los Rio's Heads 400 At Shoppers' League Fete

Dr. Tugwell, Mrs. Wheeler and Mrs. Shouse Attend Messrs. Anderson, Clark and Allen Speak Mrs. Ezekiel Announces Labor Lecture Series

Headed by the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, prominent figures of the Washington scene attended the luncheon given yesterday by the Washington League of Women Shoppers. Members of this organization, of which Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel is president, are interested in fair working conditions for employes of Washington stores and industries.

The affair, attended by 400, was held at the Congressional Country Club. The guests were at small tables, and others came in after luncheon to hear the feature of the event, a talk on the subject "Do Newspapers Give Fair Accounts of Labor Problems?" Speakers were Paul Y. Anderson of the St. Louis Star-Times; Delbert Clark, of the Washington bureau of the New York Times, and Robert S. Allen, who with Drew Pearson, conducts a syndicated column.

Among the guests were Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, former braintruster, now in private business, who came from his home in New York for the occasion. Others present were Mrs. Thomas Emerson, treasurer of the league; Mrs. Edwin Colman, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, and last year president of the organization; Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Miss Mary Anderson of the Department of Labor; Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Horton, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Robert Huse, Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, wife of a member of the National Labor Relations Board; Miss Mary LaDame, Mrs. Howell Moorhead, Miss Eleanor Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Pressman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Putnam, Miss Marjorie Sachs, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Sanger and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Putnam.

Also Mrs. Edward Rosenthal, Mrs. Samuel Scribner, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Ried, Mrs. M. D. Montague, Miss Nina Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Ostrander, Miss Mary Parkhurst, and Miss Marie Schutt.

At the luncheon Mrs. Ezekiel announced that the league would hold a series of four weekly lectures on current labor problems, the first to take place October 24, time and place to be announced later. The speaker will be Sue Shephard, wife of Prof. Allen Sweazy, who is in Washington to write a book on the work of the La Follette committee. She has taught adult education at the Bryn Mawr summer school for workers and has also been on the faculty of Wellesley College.

Florence Crittenton Rally Set for Oct. 28

Friday, October 28, has been set for a rally day meeting and luncheon of the Florence Crittenton Circles. It will be held at the home, 4759 Reservoir road with members of the board of managers as hostesses.

Plans for the season include an open house, October 25 for which invitations have been sent to the 3,000 donors in last year's Community Chest drive who designated the home for their contributions.

Hadassah to Fete Hannah Goldberg

The Washington unit of Junior Hadassah, the Young Women's Zionist Organizaztion of America, will hold a dinner meeting at 7 p. m. Wednesday, honoring Miss Hannah Goldberg, an attorney of Boston, former national vice president of Junior Hadassah and now a vice president of the Boston section of the Business and Professional Women's Division of Senior Hadassah. She will speak on the "Position of Jews in the World Today."

Miss Carolyn Berenter is president of the local Junior Hadassah.

Miss Goldberg is a member of the Massachusetts Association of Women Lawyers and the Jewish Women's College Club of Boston. She is a graduate of the Boston University Law School. During her association with Junior Hadassah she served as president of the New England Region, national organization chairman and national vice president.

To Return From Front

Ignacio Garcia del Castillo, former commercial secretary of the Spanish Embassy, who was called to the front several weeks ago, is expected back at his post at the embassy within a week.

Miss Safford To Be Honored

Several parties are being planned in honor of Miss Bernice Safford, daughter of Mrs. W. E. Safford, and John Pratt, whose wedding will take place Tuesday, October 25, at the home of Mrs. Safford.

Brunson McChesney has issued cards to a cocktail party next Saturday at 2601 Thirtieth street, where he lives with several other bachelors. Miss Mary Francis Warner will entertain at a similar affair next Sunday afternoon.

Miss Safford will have as her only attendant Miss Martha Joyner, of Montclair, N. J., who has been residing with the bride-to-be and her mother. Mr. McChesney will be best man.

The ceremony will be attended only by relatives and close friends.

Earl Beauchamp Leaves Today

Lord Beauchamp, reputed one of the wealthiest earls of England, will return to New York today from Washington, accompanied by his daughters, Lady Mary and Lady Dorothy Lygon. The party will be at the Waldorf Astoria Towers before sailing for Honolulu.

The earl and his daughters have been in Washington to attend the reunion of the Ligon family, at which several hundred were present. Headquarters were at the Washington Hotel, and a feature of the event was a speech by Lord Beauchamp.

The latter, accompanied by his daughters, is on a trip around the world.

J. T. Irwins Celebrate 15th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Irwin gave an "at home" last Wednesday to celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary. Assisting were Mrs. Harry Hendricks, Mrs. Theodore Snyder, and Mrs. Eugene Sharkoss.

Mrs. Irwin has as her guest at the present time, Mrs. Hudson Harlan, of Wakeeney, Kans.

Capital's Debutante List Filled Early

One Cancels Coming Out Wrightson Tea Dec. 4 Capt. Edie to Give Ball

With several debutantes settling on dates for their coming-out parties this past week-end, the list of those who will make their bows this winter is practically completed, much earlier than is usual in a Washington season.

Although several new parties have been announced, one scheduled ball has been canceled—that which the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor were to have given December 26 for their younger daughter, Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor. The latter has decided to continue her studies this year rather than make her debut, but probably will be among next season's buds.

One of the last debutantes to join this season's group is Miss Aileen Gorgas Wrightson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dougherty Wrightson. She will be presented December 4, at a tea at her parents' home.

Miss Maisie Howard, one of the most prominent of this year's debutantes, will be feted at a ball to be given January 2 by her uncle, Capt. John R. Edie, U. S. N., retired, at his residence on Sixteenth street. She also will be honored at a dance at which Princess Margaret Boncompagni will be hostess, although the date has not yet been set.

December 10 is the date chosen by Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson for a tea at which they will introduce their daughter, Miss Nancy Hoskinson. A dance in the Christmas holidays also is being planned for the debutante.

Miss Sylvia Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Alexander, will bow to Capital society the latter part of the month at a tea at the home of her parents, for which the date still is to be set.

Juniors Dance At Chevy Chase

Students at Chevy Chase Junior College opened their social season last Saturday evening with a dance given by Mrs. Frederick Ernest Farrington, presiding regent of the school.

Autumn flowers were used in decoration, and music was furnished by The Diplomats. In the receiving line were Mrs. Farrington, Mrs. Philip Milo Gail and Dean Lucy Jamieson.

Student hostesses at the party were Marion Silverstein, Lavte Thomas Wheeler, Betsy Hollingsworth, Lorrain Gibney and Nelda Embry.

Cornell Women's Club Meets at Dinner Tomorrow

The Cornell Women's Club of Washington will hold its first dinner meeting of the season tomorrow evening at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. E. A. Edson, president, is in charge of arrangements. Hostesses for the evening will be Miss Josephine Banks, Mrs. Norman C. Rogers and Miss Margaret Pfeif. Miss Anne T. Lawrence of the interior decorating department of a large Washington store will talk on "Fall Room Planning."

Mrs. Edson and her executive committee, Mrs. Clifford G. Cornwell, vice president; Miss Frederica Ritter, treasurer, and Mrs. Francis Brotherhood, secretary, have planned a program for the year.

Jewish Juniors To Give Party

The Washington Section of the National Council of Jewish Juniors will hold its first membership party of the season, a bridge-fashion show, Wednesday evening, at the Meridian Mansions, 2400 Sixteenth street.

Membership teams under the captaincy of: Anne Bachman, Tillie Berliant, Rebecca Blum, Dorothy Fabricant, Estelle Funt, Lillian Jonisch, Rose Metz, Louise Rose, Betty Sandler, Rose Schaff, Dorothy Schiller, Frieda Shatenstein, Jerry Silverberg, Anne Silverstein, Sue Taranto and Dorothy Volner.

The captains will act as hostesses during the evening and the models will be the members of council.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, of Florida, returned to Washington yesterday after spending a week at the Waldorf Astoria in New York.

Mrs. Robert M. Danford, wife of Gen. Danford, has returned to her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street from a stay in South Carolina. She was accompanied by Miss Betty Nutman.

Robert W. Bruere, chairman of the Maritime Labor Board, and Mrs. Bruere have returned from their summer home at Sneden's Landing, N. Y., and have taken an apartment at Tilden Gardens for the winter.

Mrs. Charles LeFevre, who has been at the Waldorf Astoria for a week, has returned to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Norman, of Louisville, Ky., are at the Carlton.

Capt. and Mrs. James W. Farmer and Mrs. Douglas P. Birnie are at the Hotel Commodore in New York from their summer home at Lakeville, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Hubbard, of Chicago, are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Beverly H. Rogers, of Greyholm, Georgetown, is at the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Wilbur Smith and Miss Mary V. Roach, of Pasadena, Calif., are at the Wardman Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin D. Hildreth, of Washington, are at the St. Regis Hotel in New York.

Miss Elsie L. Keim and Miss Helen B. Warner, of Tarrytown, N. Y., are spending several days at the Wardman Park.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WITH NARY a cocktail party over the week-end to keep members of society in town, and perfect weather to lure them away to the country, people generally seem to have spent the past two days anywhere but in the Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett deserted Chilly Bleak Farm, their place near Middleburg, where they have spent nearly every week-end this fall, to go to the race meets at the Rolling Rock Club in Pittsburgh. They were accompanied by Mrs. William Langley, of Long Island, Pittsburgh formerly was Mrs. Garrett's home city.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Also at the races from Washington was Thomas Leiter, who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Park. His hosts took a house near Ligonier for the event.

THE USUAL FESTIVITIES which accompany house parties at smart race meets—dinners, dances, skeet shoots, golfing, cross country hiking, club gatherings and fox hunting—were climaxed on Saturday with a brilliant ball at the Rolling Rock. The club was founded 20 years ago by the late Richard Beatty Mellon, brother of the late Andrew W. Mellon, one-time Secretary of the Treasury and later United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's.

Meanwhile, a son of the late banker and art collector, Paul Mellon, was contributing to the family's reputation as horse fanciers by riding in several events at the Trinity Church Horse Show held on Saturday near Upperville, Va. The show, which included a pageant, attracted hundreds from Washington and the nearby hunting country. The costume in the pageant which caused the most comment, although it did not win first prize, was that of Mrs. W. C. Seipt, who came as an Irish peasant woman. Bare feet and legs, her hair down her back, and a pig which she bought at the show and carried around under her arm, were realistic features of Mrs. Seipt's get-up.

Taylor Hardin, who acted as manager of the show, and Mrs. Hardin, had with them Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Hardin, jr., of Washington. With H. Rozier Dulaney were H. F. Clark and B. Powell Minnigerode. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Frost, of Middleburg, were accompanied by Henry Frost, jr. Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, of Warrenton, rode side saddle in several entries, wearing a dark blue habit.

MARION AND CATHERINE COLT, who will be presented to society here this winter by Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason, are fond of dogs, horses and studies. Marion is enrolled at Bennington College, progressive Vermont institution, and Catherine is an art student at the New York School of Applied Design. Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Colt, of Tuxedo Park, they generally spend the week-end in the country with their parents. They will have a large house party for next Saturday's Tuxedo Autumn Ball, where, with five other debutantes, the sisters Colt will "come out." Among their guests for the party will be Betty Lou Dillingham, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, of Honolulu, are well known in Washington.

MEMBERS of the entire staffs of embassies and legations here occasionally have to go into the strictest mourning when a prominent member of the Government or the royal family of their homeland dies. The Rumanian legation emerges tomorrow from deep mourning for the late Queen Marie, but still has three months of semimourning to keep.

ANTHONY DE BALASY, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, will sail on Wednesday for a vacation in Hungary. He expects to be back here in December.

Secretary Ickes' Niece Is Married In Connecticut

Of interest to Washington was the wedding in Westport, Conn., on Saturday to Mary Ickes Watson, daughter of Dr. John B. Watson, well-known psychologist, to Paul Hartley, of New York. The bride is a niece of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

The ceremony took place in the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. C. H. Coker officiating. Only members of the families and close friends were present, and both bride and bridegroom were unattended.

Mrs. Hartley was divorced three years ago from J. C. Jones, of Texas, and the bridegroom was divorced by Margaret B. Hartley, of Westport, a week ago.

Walkers Plan Home in Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas LeClair Walker, who were married October 7, will be at home at their new residence on Oxford road, Glen Echo, Md., after November 1.

The bride is the former Miss Helen Louise Fischer, daughter of George Fischer, of Washington. Mr. Walker is the son of Mrs. Florence A. Walker, of Glen Echo.

Their wedding took place at the Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, the Rev. Edward Goetze officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace over satin, a tulle veil held to a coronet of orange blossoms, and carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Burwell to Talk

Miss Winifred Burwell will speak at the forum luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club today at club headquarters, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, at 12:30 o'clock. Miss Burwell, past president of the Bank Women's Club of Washington, will discuss interesting aspects of banking. Mrs. Garland Ferguson, vice president of the club, will preside in the absence of the president, Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard.

Miss Blandford, J. M. Seay Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Malcolm Seay, who were married last Friday, will reside at 3103 Tenth street North, Arlington, on their return from a brief wedding trip by motor.

The bride, the former Miss Evelyn Baden Blanford, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Blandford, of Arlington, and Mr. Seay is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse G. Seay, of Schoolfield, Va.

Their marriage took place at Trinity Episcopal Church, Arlington, the Rev. Boyd C. Gowarth officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white slipper satin made on princess lines, with a long train and a tulle veil attached to a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mary Isabel Blandford, who served as maid of honor for her sister, wore an aquamarine satin frock trimmed with Dubonnet velvet and a small velvet bonnet to match. She carried pink roses. The bride's other attendants were her cousins, the Misses Louise Baden, of Naylor, Md., and Peggy Dant, Mrs. Granville Everson and Miss Marian Malcolm, of Washington. Their gowns of crushed rose satin, made like that of the maid of honor, were trimmed with russet velvet and their hats of pleated net had circular face veils trimmed with russet velvet. They carried arm bouquets of chrysanthemums.

Mr. Seay had as his best man his brother, J. G. Seay, and ushers were Arnett Card, of Mount Rainier, Md.; Vernard Marcey and Jesse Bateman, of Arlington, and William Baden, of Naylor, the bride's cousin.

Mrs. Hattie F. Ganes To Entertain Today

In celebration of her birthday, Mrs. Hattie F. Ganes, formerly of Memphis, now of Washington, will entertain at a luncheon and card party today at Harvey's Restaurant.

There will be 30 in the company.

A. J. Seals To Live Here After Trip

Bride Was Miss Power Wed at Sacred Heart Howard Seal Best Man

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Joseph Seal, who were married Saturday at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, will live at 3613 Fourteenth street on their return from a wedding trip to New York and Atlantic City.

The bride is the former Miss Anne Foley Power, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. James Power, of Washington. Mr. Seal is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander R. Seal, also of this city. The Rev. John S. Spence officiated at their wedding.

Mrs. Power was married in a gown of royal blue lace with a blue velvet turban and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Delbert Reynolds, of New York, who served as matron of honor, chose wine-colored lace with a velvet turnban and carried pink roses. Howard R. Seal was best man for his brother.

A reception followed the ceremony. Among out-tof-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Duffy, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilson and Mrs. P. J. Hartnett, all of New York, and Mrs. William Blakeslee and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Berube, of New Haven.

Butlers to Live In Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Butler, who were married last Wednesday, will be at home after November 15, at 122 East Chestnut street, Alexandria.

The bride is the former Miss Aneita May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Steck May, of 5205 Massachusetts avenue.

The wedding took place in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church at Petersburg, Va., the Rev. James Madison officiating. The bride wore a teal blue frock and hat with an orchid corsage and black accessories.

The couple are motoring through the mountains of North Carolina, and in Anderson, S. C., will visit Mr. and Mrs. Elliott K. Rucker and Mrs. Bogue W. Snipes.

Party to Benefit Kenmore Fund

The Washington branch of the Kenmore Association, of which Mrs. W. E. Pattison French is regent, has completed plans for a benefit card party Tuesday, October 25, at 2 o'clock at the Shoreham Hotel. The proceeds will be for the endowment fund for Kenmore, the home of George Washington's sister Betty, wife of Col. Fielding Lewis.

The restoration of this national shrine is complete. In Betty Washington Lewis' room, containing her own bed, where George Washington slept after the surrender of Yorktown, is a closet containing a number of colonial costumes. Other authentic costumes are being added to the collection.

Near the bed is a wig stand on which rests a wig and a salt glaze powder jar.

The Wedgewood Kenmore commemorative plates will be on sale at the card party.

Catholic Daughers Drive for Members

Much interest is being taken in the membership campaign of Court District of Columbia, No. 212, of the Catholic Daughters of America with Miss Mary Weide as chairman.

Married Man Finds This Column Too Conservative on 'Dutch Treat' Issue; Its Hecklers Too 'Leftist.'

ON THE BASIS of mail received, it appears that readers of this column are unevenly divided on the question of whether or not it is good social usage, or established social custom, for a man and a girl to go out together on a dutch-treat basis. To date, the voting stands 65 per cent "aye" and 35 per cent "nay." Men take the lead in championing the idea, outnumbering women advocates by a ratio of 5 to 2. The ratio is even in the minority camp, men and women voting shoulder to shoulder against it. Just what this puzzle in mathematics connotes, this columnist is not prepared to say, never having been much of a hand at figures. It may mean simply that all precincts haven't been heard from, or again it may mean that the ladies are falling for a sucker game. Following are representative opinions on the subject, and it is our intention to bring the discussion to a close with this issue. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As a married man, my interest in the divergence of opinion between your good self and certain correspondents, concerning the propriety of the dutch-treat system of financing courtship, is purely academic. I no longer tread those paths in which "to dutch or not to dutch" looms as an important question. It seems to me that you take a rather narrow view of the problem; that some of your hecklers are a trifle leftist in their ideas, and that "Mr. Indignant" appears merely to be venting his spleen over a snub or two.

Let me revert to my "good old days" (please keep it in quotes, in case my wife reads this) of bachelor freedom with the statement that I never took a girl out more than once, if that, unless I had some reason to believe she found my company at least as important as what I could spend on her. Like many young men in their twenties and thirties, my income varied from time to time, and my cash on hand from day to day.

I never invited a girl out unless I was armed with the price of a good movie and a drink or two, at least. However, if she wanted more than that, plus my company, and wanted to ante up for it, she was at liberty to do so. Nor was such an ante ever regarded as a loan. But she soon came to know that the next time I was in funds (which occurred pretty regularly on pay day) the surplus would be spent on her.

On the other hand, I never hesitated to phone a girl and tell her the wolf was howling at my door that particular evening, but that if she cared to "set a spell," I would drop round for a couple of hours' chit-chat, a bout at cards or what-not. If she wanted more and could pay for it, it was up to her. But she knew that the arrival of my next pay check would be the signal for an excursion outside her home.

Perhaps I am unusually lucky, but the many girls I knew and liked before the right one came along, seemed nearly always ready to meet me on a 50-50 basis whenever necessary. They seemed glad to help me spend my money when I had it; and also time, when that was all I had to offer. And make no mistake about it, they were all nice girls, and I never asked a girl to go "dutch" in my life . . . I still think my system was pretty good, pretty American and eminently fair to all concerned. Yours,

T. D. P.

The Desperate Ladies

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Never in my life have I had such a sickening dose of masculine conceit and petty ignorance as that ladled out in the communication from "Indignant" in your column of October 12. I am considered an attractive girl, 20 years old, and I have been around in my time. I have dated high school boys, college youths and young men just getting started in the business world (native Washingtonians and out-of-towners) and never once have I come across an instance where the matter of the girls being expected to go dutch-treat was even hinted . . . Furthermore, on several occasions I have heard the girls who go dutch-treat being laughed at behind the hands of both boys and girls. Such girls are said to be "hard up for dates."

I have talked this over with a number of young men who mock the idea of the dutch-treat system, and who are anything but complimentary in their comment about the men who practice it.

It may interest "Indignant" to know that neither I, nor any of the girls I know, have ever passed up a date with a man simply because he was a "low paid 'white collar worker'." If a girl likes a man enough to make a date with him, she would just as soon go with him to a neighborhood movie house as to the opera . . . "Indignant" had better examine himself more closely and find out the real reason why his dates fall through.

EXASPERATED GIRL.

Sensible Federal Workers

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your replies to "Dutch Treat" and "Indignant," respectively, indicate either an old-fashioned attitude or lack of information with regard to current social usage. The girls in my college always bore their own expenses because when we paid tuition we got return tickets for all events of the year, except fraternity-sorority affairs, and for these every student bought his own ticket.

We continue this system now that school days are over, and it is a sensible plan for government workers, since men and women get the same pay and we are all more interested in studying (at night) toward promotion than we are in a social life.

Some of the young men who don't like "dutch treating" are in the social whirl here. Minor clerks by day, they are guests of socially prominent families at night, who press them into service to squire their daughters around. The daughters don't pay the expenses, of course, but neither do the young men. The parents take care of it.

Our crowd of "dutch treaters" a wholesome group of young people whose object in life is decidedly NOT matrimony, but a good time when we have time for it, without the men having to miss meals to make it possible. For my part, I don't like your comments and I consider "Dutch Treat," with whom you sympathize, a little bum.

WHITE COLLAR GIRL.

Midas Touch on All-Occasion Dress

King Midas once turned all he touched into gold which is just what present-day coutouriers are achieving for both day and evening glitter. Practical daytime frocks, as the one illustrated, gain a new prestige when gilded here and there a bit. This wine-toned crepe looks more than its money's worth due to two gold yolk ornaments and a belt buckle of gold kid repeated in piping on black kid gloves and bag. A dress of this type is sufficiently straightforward in silhouette to meet daily business requirements. The softly pleated bodice and immense sleeves plus its touch of gilt make it equally adaptable to wear from office to dinner and dancing

Film Boxers Keep Fit by Exercise

Workouts Are Vigorous Put Leisure in Sports Activity Helps Work

By Ida Jean Kain.

MAYBE YOU have wondered whether the two-fisted he-men of the movies are in as good fighting trim as they appear to be. . . Well, when you hear the entire story, they're even better! When you see these boys in fight pictures they are not only waging their own battles realistically and in person, but the film tells only half of it.

Before the picture goes into production, they may train for months, and then after production starts weeks of fighting may be required to furnish the few rounds actually filmed. Before Wayne Morris made one of his pictures, he trained with "Mushy" Callahan, former welterweight champion, doing road work, shadow boxing and taking on a few sparring partners, just as if he were preparing for a title bout.

After this had gone on for three months, he fought every day for five weeks until the fight scenes were satisfactorily filmed.

They Like Sports

That takes care of the career side of such a motion picture actor's life. Keeping fit is a business with him. . . . but it is also his recreation. If you check up on some of these Hollywood citizens, you will find that Morris and Johnnie Davis, his partner in a number of films, spend all their spare time on the golf course or tennis courts. Pat O'Brien, Jimmy Cagney and Allen Jenkins also like their golf. Errol Flynn, something of a fighter himself, likes sailing.

For recreation, most of them engage in vigorous physical activity. They don't need this type of recreation nearly as much as the man who is tied to a desk all week! The irony of it is that instead of seeking recreation in activity, the sedentary worker—who really would profit from golf or tennis on his off days—usually spends his time at sedentary recreation. A man like Morris probably would not deteriorate very much if he spent all his spare time in a hammock. The next picture, provided it offered enough fighting, would restore him to form. The business man must get his exercise during his spare time—or not at all.

Personally, you are unlikely to be interested in lasting so many rounds in the ring—even though you are the most genuine of fight enthusiasts. You don't have to keep in condition so you can fight more convincingly. But what you would like to do is increase your capacity for work and feel good while doing it. The way to do this is through physical activity, alternated with complete relaxation. The two go together.

Every business man would benefit from a definite plan for daily physical activity. Vigorous use of the muscles helps to accelerate the removal of the fatigue poisons, and after a half hour's walking or game of badminton you not only feel refreshed but you are able to relax. Don't, however, try to plunge into a strenuous exercise program. You would not continue it—besides, it might be harmful.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 16.

LAST SPRING I told the story of no less than 5,254 young ladies of Gotham who took a written test with an eye to becoming lady policemen, or copettes, here. This mighty army was competing for only 27 vacancies on the regular force, but Boss Cop Valentine pepped up the contest by hinting he expected to hire some secret service girls, or native Mata Haris, from this list, and you can see how the ladies leaped for that gaudy bait!

ALICE HUGHES.

I now learn that only 315 passed this written exam, with grades from 72 to 86, but what a collection it is! These sisters under the skin—and, they hope, the badge—present a blistering variety of big-town gals. Just, for instance, there are former students of Vassar, Wellesley and Barnard; practicing lawyers, psychiatrists and nurses, and a former chorine of Minsky burlesque, Miss Mary A. Ellis. A former member of the famous Music Hall Rockettes, dancing troupe, Miss Florence Mallee, passed with honors, and so did Ora Anderson, who writes detective yarns, and no doubt hopes for plenty material, and so did a lady boxer, Miss Regina M. Epstein, of Brooklyn.

Among the mentally successful contestants were seven newspaperwomen, 40 social workers, 138 teachers and two librarians. The 315 claimed 361 degrees and four Phi Beta Kappa keys.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As suspected, our Prize Hurricane of last month is now being viciously debated on the town's cracker barrels. Latest witness is Cap'n Raabe, who sails the yawl Spindrift out of Port Washington, Long Island. Cap'n Raabe allows the gale hit a smart 200 miles an hour as he was pilotin' the Spindrift up Long Island Sound, and is now waiting for some other old salt to raise him to 210! Any bids . . .

Complexion Of Clothes Turns to Blush

Harvest Blues Reign Fashion Show Held Hats, Gowns Feature

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WITH skin complexions becoming more and more natural in hue, clothes complexions are deepening into a decided blush. Black, once the dernier cri of fall and winter fashion modes, is still of prime fashion importance, but its authority has been questioned by the parade of harvest hues which are so abundant this year.

This was emphasized particularly at the fashion showing held Saturday at the Twenty-four Hundred Sixteenth Street Hotel at which new modes in gowns, hats and complexions were presented. While natural tones of makeup predominated, gowns, ensembles and hats were vivid in coloring. Featured especially were the brilliant feather tones in purples, scarlets and blue-greens. In the afternoon frocks, the autumnal flush of grape, vintage, wine, plum, raisin, eggplant, prune, spice and cinnamon seemed to have replaced the inevitable black.

Millinery modes have picked up color cues from these discreet fall tones and in many cases repeated or contrasted individual color harmonies. Heady tones of Burgundy in crepe or sheer wool daytime dresses were given emphasis by toques of the same shade. Felts, beavers, feathers, fabrics and velvets were in some cases dyed or blended to create a perfect color picture for these identically tinted ensembles.

Contrast in color is as smart as color harmony this fall as was evidenced in evening ensembles boasting several tones. A tingling color combination to try for dinner or dancing is a dark basic crepe evening gown, severe in line. Over this, slip a chartreuse jacket, glittering now in lemon tints, now in lime. Top a high nest of curls with a feather fancy a queer fascinating shade of creme de menthe. This is expressive of the new trend in color as against last year's deep black.

Jack Rollins was commentator for the show which featured Emile gowns, Mrs. Cardwell's hats and Marie Earle complexions.

MR. GINK—Did I ever tell you folks about the experience we had out near Chillicothe, Ohio?——

MRS. GINK—It was really nearer Cincinnati, George. Don't you remember the signpost said——

JUNIOR—It wasn't very near either place. It was 37½ miles——

MR. GINK—Oh, all right. Well, anyway, it was out in Ohio——

MRS. GINK—You see we were on our way to see George's sister. She lives in North Vernon, Ind.

SISTER—She doesn't live there any more.

MRS. GINK—Well, she did. She's moved into Cincinnati. They've taken an apartment.

MR. GINK—Well, any way, we were driving along one evening——

SISTER—It really wasn't evening, Daddy.

MRS. GINK—Don't contradict your father!

JUNIOR—It was exactly 5:11½!

MRS. GINK—See! He knows! He's got a new wrist watch.

MR. GINK—Well, anyway, we were driving along this country road——

MRS. GINK—You see we'd had to make a detour because the bridge had been washed out——

SISTER—It really wasn't a bridge?——

MRS. GINK—Why wasn't it a bridge? I guess I know.

JUNIOR—It was a culvert.

MR. GINK—Well, as I said, we were driving along and I noticed just ahead at the side of the road——

MRS. GINK—A parked automobile!

SISTER—Wait! You didn't tell about the bushes, daddy.

MR. GINK—Oh, yes, there was a clump of sumac bushes——

JUNIOR—They weren't sumac. They were elderberry.

MR. GINK—Well, I noticed this parked car and I wouldn't have thought anything about it, except——

MRS. GINK—There was a woman in it!

MR. GINK—Say! Who's telling this story?

MRS. GINK—Well, it takes you so long to get anywhere. All right, go on.

MR. GINK—Well the car was parked facing us and I could see there was a woman in it——

MRS. GINK—You've already told that.

MR. GINK—Now wait a minute. Well, she looked to be about 27 years old——

MRS. GINK—Why George; that woman was 40 years old if she was a day!

SISTER—You didn't tell about what was in the back of the car.

MRS. GINK—Don't interrupt your father. Wait till he gets to it.

MR. GINK—Well just as I drove up toward this clump of bushes—I guess I was 25 feet away——

JUNIOR—It was nearer 30 feet.

MR. GINK—Well just as we got up near her car——

MRS. GINK—She signaled to us!

MR. GINK—Say, are you telling this story?

MRS. GINK—I'm sorry. Go on.

MR. GINK—Well, just as I stopped——

MRS. GINK—A man stepped out of the bushes!

MR. GINK—Say!

MRS. GINK—All right. Go on.

SISTER—It was just AFTER you stopped. Daddy.

MRS. GINK—Be still. Go on, George.

MR. GINK—And just then this woman——

MRS. GINK—Let out a scream!

MR. GINK—And then just as she screamed this man——

MRS. GINK—Wait George! You're getting it all wrong. Let me go back to the beginning and tell it right. Now this is the way it was . . .

Small Rugs Out, Found Impractical

Peewee hats are "in," but peewee rugs are "out," as definitely so as the miniature golf courses of a few years ago, which had their vogue and vanished, almost actually overnight.

The reason is not hard to find. Little rugs, dabs of this and that, on up to the once-popular 9x12, were cluttering and confusing in themselves, and did everything they could to interfere with color schemes, or even upset them entirely.

They were impractical, too. They got in the way, every time they were disturbed there was a council—even if of only one woman with herself!—to "see which way they look best."

It was the first such "bridal initiation" Fort Myer has witnessed for three years and included the traditional jog over rough ground, the fort's drill field in this case.

Arlington Man Wins Hearing on Appeal To State Supreme Court in Arson Trial

Arlington County
Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va.
Tel. Oxford 0509.

A writ of error and supersedeas has been awarded Roger Daniels, former trash and garbage collection contractor, by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals from a conviction of arson, according to word received yesterday by Attorney Arthur C. Stickley, II.

It is probable the appeal will be heard before the Supreme Court in the next few months, Stickley said.

Held After Explosion

Daniels was arrested and charged with arson following an explosion at his home, 400 block of South Edgewood street, Arlington, on Labor Day last year.

Two alleged accomplices, Edgar Heishman and William Stern, pleaded guilty to arson charges and each was given a five-year suspended sentence by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, judge of the Arlington County Circuit Court. They were tried in October last year. Daniels was tried in November last year and given a sentence of five years.

Attorney Stickley moved to set aside the verdict as contrary to law and evidence and it was not until March of this year that Judge McCarthy denied the motion.

In applying to the Supreme Court, Attorney Stickley cited 19 alleged errors in the lower court's proceedings.

One of the principal errors is that Daniels was indicted under the statute against arson, and evidence was introduced in an effort to show intention to defraud an insurance company, which is covered by another statute and was not included in the indcitment.

Clinic Gets X-ray Machine

Addition of an X-ray machine at the Cherrydale Health Center will greatly increase the scope of the clinic being conducted by the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association, officials reported yesterday.

The machine will be used in connection with the monthly chest clinic at the health center on the second Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. The clinic is in charge of Dr. H. A. Latane.

Librarian to Speak

Miss Eleanor Leonard, county librarian, will be the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of Cherrydale School tonight.

Mrs. N. R. Davies, county health nurse, will distribute five-point health certificates to a group of the school children.

Bingo for Democrats

Club to Hear Debate

A debate on guidance will feature the monthly dinner meeting of the Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club to be held tomorrow night at 6:46 o'clock at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. The program will be under the direction of Miss Sally Loving, chairman.

The subject of the debate will be "Resolved: That guidance of the youth is more effective in school than in the home." Contestants will be students from the Washington Lee High School. Dora Oddsson and Don Gaddis will take the affirmative side, Margaret Bixler and Charles Cross the negative.

Judges will be Mrs. Pearl W. Sharpe, Mrs. Nannie Middleton and Mrs. Anna Waltz.

Clarendon Society to Meet

The Woman's Society of the Clarendon Presbyterian Church will hold a special meeting at the church tonight on work in the Southern mountains. A play, "The Thank-you Party," will be presented by a group of young people, and the layettes made by the women which are to be sent to the station at Flag Pont. Tenn., will be on display.

Following the presentation of the play, there will be a short business meeting.

Art Project Plans Exhibit At Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2083-M.

A Federal art project will be started in Fairfax County tomorrow with a demonstration and exhibit at Willard Hall in the town of Fairfax. Mrs. Lennig Sweet is chairman of the committee arranging for the project.

An exhibit of work from the three Virginia art centers will be shown. These were loaned by Miss Adele Clark, State director of the Federal art project, Works Progress Administration of Virginia. Miss Eleanor Rust and Miss Randolph Richardson, both of Fairfax, will assist with the exhibit.

Reception Planned

Following the all-day demonstration the local committee will hold a reception in Willard Hall Tuesday evening when Russell Parr, of the Federal arts project of Washington, will give a lecture.

The Fairfax gallery will be the fourth in the State and its proposed activities will include art education and training and the holding of exhibitions in the county. The staff will be headed by Miss Willoughby Ione, of Fairfax Station, director; Dan Arthur Dugan, of Arlington; Miss Sarah Dean McClure, of Fairfax, and Miss Lennet S. Alward, of Baileys Crossroads. Technical direction of the project will be handled through State headquarters in Richmond.

The county art center will be housed at the Fairfax Elementary School and work will be open to the public, it was announced. Several organizations in the county have agreed to assist in sponsoring the project, including the county school board, Fairfax Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association and the County Chamber of Commerce.

Assisting Mrs. Sweet in organizing the project are Mrs. H. N. Clark, James E. Bauserman, Mrs. Paul E. Brown and Mrs. Thomas P. Chapman.

Speakers Bureau Set Up

A speaker service bureau has been established by the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Florence Jodzies, secretary announced. The trade body intends to furnish speakers on various phases of county government and activities to any organization desiring information.

Subjects for which speakers are agriculture, county library, education, finance, highway and transportation, legislation, planning and zoning, real estate reassessment, now available without cost include, public welfare, publicity, wild life and the county-wide program of the chamber of citizenship, government, business and history.

The chamber has established a private employment register where those seeking employment may file applications and persons desiring employes may leave their requests.

Farm Maps Ready

Joseph E. Beard, Fairfax County agricultural agent has announced that a land-use map of the county has been completed by the State planning commission of Richmond under the direction of F. S. Shelton. The county has been mapped according to present use and condition of the land and adaptability to present uses. The map is on file in the county agent's office and can be seen by persons desiring such information, and recommendations of county and State agricultural departments.

The county agent and the agriculture committee of the county Chamber of Commerce are arranging to hold a county-wide poultry and dairy meeting in Fairfax on November 16. State and national specialists in poultry and dairy husbandry will speak on latest methods in the two leading enterprises in Fairfax County.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

MR. F. D. ROOSEVELT,
THE WHITE HOUSE,
CITY.

DEAR PRESIDENT:

Some one was telling me yesterday that you certainly like fried potatoes. I wonder if you're lucky enough to get 'em nice and crisp, or do they dish 'em up to you soggy and greasy?

Harlan Miller

* * * *

If you ever get to be dictator I hope you'll make the restaurants keep 'em dry and golden brown . . . Or maybe you could persuade the Mrs. or Madame Perkins to make a radio speech about fried potatoes.

* * * *

As I promised you, I want to tell you what people are saying. They're tickled pink that you're going after the spies. Not that the varmints can do us any hurt, but they're a nuisance.

* * * *

Why, one of your niftiest statesmen was saying that he couldn't say anything in the presence of certain of the Capital's social adornments without having it turned in at the German Embassy within an hour.

"—swatting the spy"

Well, I picked up one of Harry Hopkins' boys the other day out in the suburbs, and he was just bubbling over. Said he'd been getting $11 a week from WPA, but had a regular $17-a-week job coming up. Said he's willing to work twice as hard for the extra 6 bucks.

* * * *

I wish you could tell everybody what you tell some of your close friends, that you haven't got the faintest desire to run for a third term.

Naturally you'd like to turn that man-killer of a job over to some trustworthy man whose arteries aren't too hardened.

* * * *

From the things I've heard you say I put two and two together and I tell people you've got as much respect for the third term tradition as John Hamilton or Carter Glass or your in-laws, the duPonts . . .

But the third term kinda makes a triple-threat man out of you; you can run, or punt, or forward pass.

* * * *

They're saying that some of the candidates are only double-threat men. They can punt or pass, but they can't run. Some of 'em can't even punt . . .

You might call in some of the candidates and put the truth machine on 'em to see what they'd do if elected.

* * * *

Funny how Americans worship success . . . When somebody's working the alley trade, he's just a cheap little chiseler. But if he makes a million at it, he's a great success.

Same way with Hitler. When he was yellin' and prevaricatin' his way to the top, he was just a cheap loud little liar to these fellahs; now he's all of a sudden a master mind . . .

But he's probably still the same guy.

What I'm getting at is, you'll probably have this Hitler on your neck one of these days, telling you who should be in your Cabinet and on your Supreme Court, the way he's tellin' your buddy, Chamberlain, all flushed with victory and bad manners . . .

* * * *

I saw your wife out hoss-back riding on her fifty-fourth birthday . . . I hope my b. w. can ride a horse on her fifty-fourth birthday, and looks as chipper . . .

Just privately, four of us downed a quart of champagne in honor of your First Lady's anniversary, and it wasn't just an excuse, either.

* * * *

Some of the younger fellahs I run into coming out of the White House aren't as nervous about you and your New Deal as they were, and even some of the older ones say you're mellowin' a bit . . .

I just wanta leave one solemn thought with you: Remember some of our American economic royalists are real liberals compared with the run of English Tories.

If the Republicans seem kinda bothersome around election time, remember it's because you've created twice as many good jobs for 'em to fight for. Yours for black ink and fried potatoes, ELMER.

Huge Tanker Docks in Washington

Capt. John J. Wright aboard tanker

Largest Tanker Ever to Come Up Anacostia Unloads Oil

Discharges 861,000 Gallons From Texas Takes 20 Hours; Loading Took 6 296-Foot Ship Lost Rudder on Trip

The largest freight vessel ever to nose up the Anacostia River yesterday unloaded 861,000 gallons of oil—for the Capital's oil burners—and made ready to start its trip back to Texas.

Cautiously maneuvering up the river, the Diesel-driven motorship, Dolomite No. 2, eased up to the wharf at the foot of O street southeast Saturday, and immediately began pumping the "black gold" through a 6-inch pipe that ran 500 yards underground from the wharf to a 2,000,000-gallon tank.

It had taken only eight hours to load the liquid cargo at Port Isabel, Tex., near the mouth of the Rio Grande, but the unloading operation consumed 20 hours.

The 3,000-ton twin-screw motorship, 296 feet long and 41 feet wide, had but 4 feet to spare in the 20-foot deep Anacostia channel.

The 20,500-barrel cargo represented a retail value of about $56,000, a record single load. During the 8½-day trip up the coast, bay and river, the Dolomite lost a rudder. But because it carried two rudders—something rare among coast-wise boats, according to Capt. John J. Wright—the ship was able to arrive here on schedule.

There is little danger from fire while the ship is riding along with its 19 compartments filled with oil, but when the ship's tanks are emptied, there is the danger of explosion. No special precautions are taken to guard against fire, Wright explained. A steam smother system is ready, however, in case of emergency.

When the compartments are emptied, the captain went on, gases form from the sediment and dregs, sometimes exploding. A thorough cleansing of the tanks by the same steam smother systems, however, ends that menace.

The vessel is steel, except for a few articles of furniture. Built 46 years ago as a Great Lakes bulk carrier, the Dolomite had its face and body lifted last year, and moved down the New York State Barge Canal to Albany, down the Hudson River, and for the first time tasted the salt water of the Atlantic.

Capt. Wright is also 46, 30 years of which were spent on all the seven seas. A native of Georgia, he calls Tennessee his home. He has been commanding the Dolomite and its crew of 20 for the past two months.

Patterson to Speak At Chest Luncheon

Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce, will speak at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in the Hotel Mayflower, arranged for officials of the Community Chest League and representatives of civic and educational groups.

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, league chairman, will preside.

At the speaker's table will be Mrs. James Clement Dunn, vice chairman of the league; Mrs. Wilson Lee, luncheon chairman, and her vice chairman, Mrs. William J. Flather, jr.; Coleman Jennings, president of the Community Chest; Morris Cafritz, vice chairman; William J. Flather, jr., chairman of the Chest campaign; Newbold Noyes, Lloyd Wilson, William O. Douglas, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, chairman of the league's educational meetings committee, and Mrs. Charles B. Henderson.

Others who will attend include H. L. Rust, jr.; Randolph Leigh Chauncey G. Parker, jr.; Clarence Aspinwall; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, District president of the Parent-Teachers' Association; Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the league's open house tours committee; Herbert L. Willet, jr., director of the Community Chest, and Randolph G. Bishop, assistant director.

Seven Injured In Washington Auto Crashes

3 Hurt at Fairfax
One Hit-Run Victim
Police Classes to Start

Seven persons, one an 80-year-old veteran, were injured in traffic accidents in and near the city yesterday.

Most seriously injured was Aethael Daymude, 32, of 1645 Wisconsin avenue northwest, who suffered lacerations to head and face and possible fractured skull.

He was brought to Georgetown Hospital with two other men from an accident near Tyson's Corner at Fairfax, Va. The other men, treated for cuts and bruises and released, gave their names as Lester Ourisbee, 26, 1643 Wisconsin avenue, and Clarence Lelky, 23, 2542 Thirteenth street northwest.

John Stanton, 80-year-old resident of the Soldiers' Home, was severely injured yesterday when he walked into the side of a moving automobile in the 900 block of Seventh street northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital for head lacerations and possible internal injuries and transferred to Mount Alto. James L. Harris, colored, 25, of 1124 Fifth street northwest, driver of the car, was not held.

Fritz Colpack, 38, of Berwyn, was injured early when struck by a hit-and-run driver while crossing the Baltimore boulevard in front of his home. The driver of the car was not apprehended. Officer Richard A. Pearson of the Prince Georges' County police said Colpack was taken to the Casualty Hospital by a passing motorist. The extent of his injuries was not determined immediately.

William J. Hoffman, 18, 3610 Hobson street, Brentwood, Md., was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations to his head and face and possible brain injury following a collision between his machine and another at Thirteenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. His condition was undetermined.

Ervil Matthews, 33, of Upper Marlboro, Md., was in Casualty Hospital with a possible brain concussion after a crash on the Mitchellville road near Glendale, Md. He was taken to the hospital by the Glendale Rescue Squad.

Police Classes to Start

Traffic safety lessons for District policemen which were inaugurated last year will be renewed Wednesday, Maj. Ernest W. Brown stated yesterday.

The classes, to be held every Wednesday, will continue until the entire force has attended. The school will be under the direction of Lieut. Walter Storm, instructor in the police school.

Maj. Brown said the school proved very succesful last year and that about 300 attended the lectures.

In addition to Lieut. Storm, lectures will be given by Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of the Traffic Division, and Capt. Harvey Callahan, First Precinct, both traffic safety experts, and by representatives from local motor clubs.

Riverdale Rally to Hear Sen. Sasscer

Duckett to Speak
College Park Scene
Magruder Not to Go
Pleads Illness

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer and T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, will be guest speakers tonight at the annual dinner of the Nineteenth (Riverdale) District Democratic Club of Prince Georges County at the Lord Calvert Inn, College Park, Md.

M. Hampton Magruder, collector of internal revenue for the Maryland district, who with Senator Sasscer and Duckett heads the Democratic Party in the county, was invited to speak, but will not attend, because of illness, according to Louis B. Arnold, toastmaster and chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Herbert R. O'Conor and Senator Millard E. Tydings, Democratic nominees for Governor and Senator, have received invitations to attend, Arnold said. All Democratic candidates for county offices will be present.

The dinner will be at 7 p. m., and will be followed by a dance.

Assisting Arnold on the committee in charge are Mrs. J. P. Morris, Mrs. Margaret Mattingly, Mrs. Brice Bowie, Mrs. Stephen O'Dea, Mrs. Genevieve Stewart, Ralph Powers, William A. Carson and Al Smith. Reservations for the dinner and dance may be made with any member of the committee.

Pollution Plan Ready

The $528,666 program of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to install trunk sewers and pumping stations in Hyattsville, Mount Rainier, Brentwood and Colmar Manor will eliminate all pollution in the Anacostia River and tributaries, it was indicated yesterday by J. Darby Bowman, commission secretary.

Bowman, making public details of the commission's program, for which a Public Works Administration grant of $237,897.67 has been asked, said the plan of the WSSC calls for carrying its sewage to the District disposal plant at Blue Plains.

Colmar Club to See Film

Motion pictures on the activities of Goodwill Industries will be shown at 8 o'clock tonight to the Colmar Manor Men's Club at its monthly meeting in the Colmar Manor municipal building by Dr. W. H. Snape, a representative of the self-help organization. Dr. Edgar F. Long, of the University of Maryland faculty, will speak.

Pre-School Group to meet

A special meeting of Riverdale, Md., parents sponsoring a daily pre-school play class in the community will be held tonight in the municipal building to discuss means of obtaining better facilities and equipment, necessary because of unexpected increases in attendance at the classes.

Officers of the Riverdale Mothers' Club will also be elected at the meeting. The club is directing the pre-school classes jointly with Mrs. Genevieve Koontz, Works Progress Administration supervisor.

Mrs. John Wharton Dies at U. of M.

Mrs. Pearl Conklin Wharton, 48, wife of John S. M. Wharton, construction superintendent for new buildings at Maryland University, died yesterday at her home, 1 Dickinson street, College Park, Md.

A native of New Haven, Conn., Mrs. Wharton lived at Utica, N. Y., before moving to Maryland. She had lived at College Park for nearly four years. She was a member of the Riverdale Presbyterian Church.

Beside her husband she leaves three sons, John M., Thomas P. and Edward M. Wharton, of College Park; a daughter, Mrs. William Floyd, New Hartford, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. William Duncklee, New Haven.

Funeral services will be held at 8 a. m. tomorrow at her home, with burial at Snow Hill, Md.

Asbury Church Young People Bid Farewell to Their Pastor

Promise Rev. Mr. Shirkey to Carry On Stresses Duties in Final Message
Served Congregation Three Years

Young people of Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church South, last night promised their departing pastor and their Saviour that they would "carry on."

"O Man of Galilee, you can depend on me, for I will keep the light," promised the group members of the young people's societies, as their pastor, leaving next week for a new pulpit in San Antonio, Tex., led them in a service of devotion and consecration.

Addressing them for the last time, the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey warned that "you are responsible for sharing the light of Christianity with others. There are young people in this city who will never know the light of Jesus unless you share it with them."

John Work presided at the service, a feature of which was the presentation of the gift of a pocket Bible to the minister, with Raymond Hargroves officiating. Mrs. Lloyd Horne and Phyllis Reger also took part.

In being transferred to Travis Park M. E. Church South, in the Texas city, the Rev. Mr. Shirkey, who has served here for three years, will be a neighbor of Canon Edwin H. Jones, who left two weeks ago to become rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church there.

The Rev. Mr. Shirkey, who came to Francis Asbury from Pace Memorial Church, Richmond, has been for two years chairman of the department of evangelism for the churches' federation and has been president of the United Methodist Preachers' Meeting of the three branches of the denomination.

During his pastorate at Francis Asbury, 414 new members have been received and $10,000 has been paid on the principal of the church indebtedness.

Colored Youth Problems Topic Of P.-T.A. Session

Problems in connection with colored youth were discussed by members of the public schools administration and the National Youth Administration last night at the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church at a public meeting of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, thanked the federation for co-operation with the school administration.

Public behavior of youthful citizens and development of proper attitudes toward property and toward those in authority, he emphasized as a special problem of the federation and school system. R. O'Hara Lanier, of the National Youth Administration, gave illustrations of methods of that agency in solving economic and health problems of youth otherwise unprovided for. John R. Pinkett explained objects of the Community Chest, of which the federation is an agency.

Fliers Consume Space and Pie in D. C. Air Derby

Pumpkin pie, puzzles and airplanes were mixed yesterday into an obstacle race for local fliers arranged by the Washington Air Derby Association.

Fliers had to predict their cruising speed over three courses, and between flights solve mechanical puzzles and eat pumpkin pie with their hands tied.

The winning team was Herbert Gookins, pilot, and Miss Beatrice Greenhalgh. They had 94.42 points, the judges decided.

25,000 Short, Roll Call Goes Into Last Day

U. S. Employes Lag
61,000 Signed in 1937
Only 47,000 This Year

The 1938 Red Cross roll call enters its last day today, nearly 25,000 short of its goal of 100,000 members, Edgar Morris, roll call chairman, said yesterday. Enrollments over the week-end were 2,446, bringing the total for the campaign to 75,709.

Morris yesterday appealed especially to Government workers who, he said, are far behind their record of last year when they furnished 61,000 members, as compared with only 47,480 so far this year.

Confident the 100,000 goal would be reached, despite the 25,000 deficiency so far, he emphasized that last year 19,000 members were received after the roll call officially closed.

Booths will be open all day today in downtown banks, department stores and hotels and at branch banks throughout the city. Key workers in Government departments and business establishments will be on duty until close of business and roll call headquarters, 1601 I street northwest, will be open until midnight.

Standing of the Roll Call committee yesterday was: Government, 47,480 members; financial, 3,037; professional, 4,023; utilities, 3,880; general business (large), 9,279; general business (small), 2,564; residential apartments, 1,597, and other, 748; special gifts, 162; booths, 2,939.

D. C. Printers Urge AFL to Seek Peace

For Perkins Plan
CIO Weighs Idea
Anderson Interested
But Locher Scoffs

Columbia Typographical Union yesterday asked the American Federation of Labor to accept Secretary of Labor Perkins' proposal to end the "war" between the A. F. of L. and the Committee for Industrial Organization. C. I. O.'s District Industrial Union Council prepared to discuss the plan at its meeting tonight.

Secretary Perkins, speaking at Columbus, Ohio, Saturday, urged the union foes to name five intermediaries each, with three more to be chosen by the ten. The 13 then would convene to seek a final peace in the three-year labor strife. Thus far both William Green, A. F. of L. president, and John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, have given no indication of accepting the plan.

The Typographical Union here also instructed its officers here to contact other leading units among 800 printer locals and urge them to take similar action to hasten closing of the breach in labor's ranks.

A. F. of L. Leader Doubtful

Last night, however, John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union executive A. F. of L. body for the District, declared he foresaw no general move by the other unions here to back the printers' demand.

Locher, who returned yesterday from Houston, where he had attended the A. F. of L. convention, said he doubted whether the Central Union would take any action in the matter at its meeting tonight. He would not comment on Miss Perkins' peace plea, pointing out he needed time to study the proposal.

C. I. O. Aide Is Hopeful

John Anderson, president of the District Industrial Council, the C. I. O.'s central body here, said yesterday that the group would thoroughly thrash out the issue.

"We will welcome any move toward peace," he said. "We are not concerned as to who makes the peace proposals or as to the terms, so long as peace is achieved.

"I believe the rank and file of the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. wish for peace and that they will bring pressure to bear upon the leaders to achieve that peace."

Locher was pessimistic last night over possibility of any immediate solution to labor's most critical problem. He said:

"It doesn't look as if we will have peace, at least not the way things are at present."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

More Notable Pictures Are on Their Way

Loew Houses Announce Impressive Bookings
The President Thought It a 'Grand Show'
Week-End Notes of the Theater

EASTERN DIVISION MANAGER CARTER BARRON and his associate executives in the loewcal Loew organization are sure that October and November will leave vivid memories in the minds of Washington picturegoers. Their optimism seems not entirely unfounded. From the combined resources of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists and Paramount, many notable productions are promised during immediately ensuing weeks.

BELL.

Among early features at Loew's Capitol Theater will be Bing Crosby in "Sing, You Sinners;" Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney in "Stablemates;" Sabu, Raymond Massey and a cast of thousands in Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of "Drums;" Freddie Bartholomew, Judy Garland, Mary Astor and Walter Pidgeon in "Listen, Darling," and Fredric March and Virginia Bruce in "There Goes My Heart."

In early prospect for the Palace are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Great Waltz," with Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Milza Korjus; Paramount's "special," "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman, with Basil Rathbone, Frances Dee and scores more; Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the English-made production of M-G-M's "The Citadel," from the novel by A. J. Cronin and heralded as one of the season's surprises; "Suez," with Tyrone Power and Loretta Young, one of Darryl Zanuck's most pretentious undertakings; Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Paulette Goddard and Roland Young in "The Young in Heart;" Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon and Ralph Bellamy in "The Lady and the Cowboy," and Fredric March and Joan Bennett in "Trade Winds."

As I say, the Loew optimism seems to have something more substantial to rest upon than a gentle breath of hope.

Some of these prospective cheer-jerkers already have been previewed and so can be definitely vouched for—"Stablemates," "Drums" and "If I Were King," for example. Critical interest in "Stablemates" was stimulated by the presence of Sam Wood, its director, in the projection room the day it was screened. A similar jog has been given interest in the approach of "Drums" by the fact that since its preview, Sabu, its prodigious boy star, has been a personal visitor in Washington and Raymond Massey, cast as the ominous Indian potentate, plotting against the whites, also has come and gone—at the opposite pole of drama—in the stellar role of Robert E. Sherwood's new play of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which opened on Broadway in the Plymouth Theater last Saturday night. By the time "If I Were King" gets around, it is probable that Frank Lloyd, its director, likewise will have been here on a personal visit.

• • • •

Tonight is the night when Gene Ford, production manager for Loew's Capitol Theater; LeRoy Thayer, president of the Dancing Masters of America, and Barnee, orchestra conductor at the Shoreham, will sit as judges in the elimination contest inspired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Great Waltz." This preliminary test of ballroom experts in three-four time will be held in the Shoreham's Blue Room as a part of the national competition to decide just which two people in the United States are the best waltzers. The finals of the local contest will be held on the stage of the Capitol Theater.

It seems that the country has been divided into 12 zones, each of which will enter its finalists in the grand national finals, the winners of the last heat, so to speak, to be awarded a three-months' motion-picture contract by M-G-M. The Washington winners will be awarded a silver cup, autographed by the three stars of the picture—Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Meliza Korjus. The local champions, later on, will meet on the Capitol stage to compete with winners from Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and the Carolinas for the zone title. Entry blanks are available at all Loew theaters. Contestants must be 16 years of age or older—it doesn't matter how much older, so don't let that stop you!

• • • •

Speaking of "The Citadel," as we were back there somewhere, it might be in order to remind all three readers that this is the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film made in London concerning which Oscar Doob, of Loew's home-office executive staff, recently went into voluble ecstasies following an intra-mural sneak preview. You may recall—all three of you—that Mr. Doob described this work as that rara avis among films, the picture which turned out to be made to order for both the critics and the public. To fortify us against the coming of the local preview, Oscar mailed us an autographed copy of the book last week, for which, needless to say, we are grateful. We may even read it.

And that reminds me. This going overboard for picture plays, before the public has had an opportunity to pass their own judgment, is a risky business and this column, for one, means to stop it before its luck runs out.

Frank Capra's film version of the Kaufman-Hart Pulitzer Prize comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," having corroborated our sight-unseen guess that it was a long-run feature and having even backed up the extravagant enthusiasms of our post-preview cymbal-whanging, now along comes Deanna Durbin in "That Certain Age" to do the same thing. Maybe four weeks was a trifle optimistic as the probable length of run of this subject at RKO-Keith's, but the fact remains that, so far, it has outdrawn every earlier Durbin vehicle at the Fifteenth street box-office. Week-end business exceeded that of "Three Smart Girls," "One Hundred Men and a Girl" and "Mad About Music."

Anyhow, four weeks or not, it is a pretty good start! But, just the same, we won't get caught doing that again, the law of averages being what it is and everything.

Incidentally, in case you hadn't heard, Patricia Norman, star vocalist with the Jan Garber Orchestra, currently furnishing the stage entertainment—and I mean entertainment—at the Earle, is a niece by marriage of Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's. In private life she is Mrs. Jack Meakin, wife of Hardie's nephew, an ace musical director for C. B. S. Mr. and Mrs. Meakin had Patricia and a party in tow on a round of night-clubbing Saturday night ending the evening with an hour of pandemonium and thick smoke at the Variety Club.

Also among those present at Variety were Frank Capra and Screenarist Sidney Buchman, still in Washington backgrounding Mr. Capra's next picture, probably to be called "Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington." Their camera crew arrived in town Saturday and will keep them spinning around like tops until Wednesday, at least. It was that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Washington manager for Columbia Pictures, who had them under his wing Saturday night. It is quite a wing Mr. Galanty has.

By and large, Saturday night was quite a night.

The most notable event, of course, was the visit of President Roosevelt to the National Theater to view Walter Huston in "Knickerbocker Holiday," the new musical comedy by Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill, in which the sturdy Dutch burghers of three centuries ago are gently pilloried for their political idiosyncrasies. The President, despite the pointed implications of some of the lines and lyrics, quite obviously enjoyed a delightful and uproarious evening. It was his third visit to the playhouse in Washington since becoming the Nation's Chief Executive. The first was to see "When Ladies Meet," the second to see Walter Huston in "Dodsworth"—thus giving Mr. Huston the sizable average of .667.

In acknowledgment of the ovation that greeted his entrance to his box, the President divided his bows and hand-wavings equally among orchestra floor, balcony and second balcony. After the performance he was host to Mr. and Mrs. Huston (Anne Sunderland) at the White House.

This column happened to be in Mr. Huston's dressing room, paying a brief good-bye-and-good-luck call to an old friend, when an important member of the White House entourage entered to inform the star and Mrs. Huston that a White House car, bearing tag number 106, was awaiting them at the stage entrance. At the door he turned and remarked to Mr. Huston, "Don't let Nelson Bell find it out, but the Chief thought it was a grand show." So now you know.

• • • •

So I think all that farewell smoker and the ladies' party for Mrs. "Min" Kaliski, given by the Variety Club a couple of months ago, was a fake. Joseph Kaliski, former Washington manager for Gaumont-British Pictures, transferred to Pittsburgh in the late summer, has returned to the National Capital in a new executive capacity. He is a welcome figure back in his old haunts—but I still think it is a racket!

COMEDY AND SENTIMENT IN CELLULOID.
Above—Pat O'Brien, John Payne and Curt Bois in one of the more fanciful scenes of "Garden of the Moon," the romantic comedy, with music, to be presented as chief photoplay feature of the bill at the Earle Theater, beginning Friday. Inset—Frances Dee, as she appears with Katharine Hepburn, Joan Bennett and numerous others in "Little Women," to be revived as chief screen feature at the Metropolitan next week

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 15

LABOR DEPT.: Sally Clark, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, who announced that she is relinquishing her song career, yesterday became a member of the Amer. Fed. of Actors— an A. F. of L. affiliate—but she still will remain friendly with Mrs. F. D. R. of the C. I. O.'s Newspaper Guild.

• • • •

TRADE DEPT.: Within the next four weeks the Board of Estimate and the City Council will start a movement to prevent any city department from purchasing Nazi-made goods, on the grounds that it is not the will of New York's taxpayers to underwrite Nazi terror.

• • • •

THEATER DEPT.: Greta Garbo, who is in New York now, met Ina Claire and discussed the theater. Miss Garbo expressed a desire to appear in a play here. "That should be easy," Miss Claire assured, "and very successful" . . . "Well," explained Garbo, "it's not so easy. And it wouldn't be so successful, for one reason" . . . "Why?" asked the stage star . . . "Because," replied the screen star, "I just don't like to see audiences in front of me."

• • • •

SPORTS DEPT.: Tommy Goodwin, the golfer who was U. S. amateur champion in 1936, has decided to enter upon a nightclub career . . . Wednesday, at La Conga, Goodwin will start his new job—vocalist with Ramon Ramos' orchestra.

• • • •

ADVERTISING DEPT.: The Paramount Theater booked Raymond Scott's Quintette, now at Le Mirage, for the week of October 26. The contract assured Scott headline billing . . . Mark Warnow's orchestra also was booked for the same theater and for the same week. Warnow was told that, because of the other commitment, he'd have to be content with second billing . . . "I'll speak to Mr. Scott about that," Warnow suggested, and Paramount was amenable . . . As a result of that conference, Scott and Warnow will share split billing . . . It was so easy to arrange this—because they're brothers.

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: Last year Jack Kirkland, author of "Tobacco Road," punched Dick Watts, the dramatic critic, because of a review Watts had written . . . The next day Kirkland announced to the press that he was quitting the drama forevermore and never would write another play . . . As a matter of fact, Jack Kirkland now is at his Pennsylvania farm completing the second act of a new play. It will be a show about the Florodora Sextette.

• • • •

LOCAL NEWS: Former Judge Alfred Talley is being mentioned most prominently as the man to be named by Gov. Lehman to supersede District Attorney Geoghan . . . Lehman's acceptance speech will include a promise that if re-elected he'll serve a full four-year term . . . The March of Time radio program leaves the air after next Friday's broadcast . . . N. T. G.'s Midnight Sun . . . Jimmy Durante will appear with Ethel Merman in the new McEvoy-Schwartz musical . . . Lupe Velez now asks everybody: "I am a beautiful character, I am a powerful character—don't you think?"

• • • •

FINANCE DEPT.: Elinore Troy, the show girl who received front-page publicity this week by kayoing Jack Doyle, already has received the reward for her deed. Instead of opening at the Hollywood Restaurant, as scheduled, Miss Troy will appear at Leon and Eddie's next week—as a strip-teaser.

• • • •

ILLUSTRATED DEPT.: The current issue of Vogue Magazine features a series of photos of the home of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . In some of these photos no credit line appears to identify the cameraman who made these pictures . . . Friends of the Windsors insist there is reason for this anonymity. They suspect that the photos were made by Cecil Beaton.

Gayety

"MERRY MAIDENS." The Independent Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 23 scenes, featuring Tommy "Bozo" Snyder and Valerie Parks, supported by Nadine Marsh, Ruth Donald, Tommy Raft, Lew Brown, Harry Seymour, Millie Convey, Jack Miller and the Three Blue Jackets. Dance numbers devised by Beverly Carr; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John, B. C. A. A.

New faces may come and go in burlesque and an artists' popularity may rise and fall according to the public's fancy, but the name of Tommy "Bozo" Snyder continues, even after more than a decade, to mean a personality which is different, above imitation and always assuring a good performance. In this week's revue at the Gayety, "Bozo" Snyder is keeping up the good work which has always been associated with his name.

The art of pantomime, of which Mr. Snyder is complete master, is practiced by this veteran comedian in a manner which makes this revue an amusing and hilarious attraction in each and every comedy detail. Mr. Snyder as most burlesque fans will know, never utters a word on the stage, his expressions and gestures speaking for themselves. In this revue Snyder, assisted by Lew Brown and Jack Miller, offers several new skits and a few of Tommy's favorite "bits" which made him famous.

Blonde and lovely Valerie Parks heads the distaff portion of the program and a better choice could not have been made. Her work in this production shows great improvement over her former appearances here. Valerie proves herself an accomplished dancer and entertainer.

One of the outstanding features of the bill are the Three Blue Jackets. These sepian lads give an exhibition of dancing rarely seen in this theater. Tommy Raft and Harry Seymour assist the aforementioned Mr. Snyder with the comedy, and Mr. Raft, in particular, seems to know just what the public likes and wants. Incidentally, Tommy's musical speciality in which he plays a guitar and trumpet demonstrates him to be as good a musician as he is comedian.

Completing the cast are Ruth Donald, Millie Convey and Nadine Marsh. The former is a valuable asset to the numerous comedy sequences, while Miss Convey entertains with several excellent dances. The girls of the ensemble are pretty and well trained and the settings and lighting effects are much above par.

Trans-Lux

For the first time in a number of weeks Czechoslovakia and its troubles do not occupy prominent footage in the Trans-Lux program. The locale of what is now most wrong in the world appears transferred to Palestine, and here are tragic scenes that should be seen by everyone to realize that threatening condition.

Labor chiefs John Lews and William Green are shown effectively, both making confounding statements. There are flashes of a very spectacular fire in Japan—inferno appears let loose here.

On the more pleasant side F. D. R's dream house, and Martha Raye's wedding are picture-noted. Sports items cover the hunting season now on, for pheasant in the East, and deer and elk in the West; the fourth and final game of the World Series and a summary of the football season to date spotlights outstanding plays and players so far. The highlights of the recent N. Y. Giants-Redskins game also are shown. There are about forty news items and all are interesting.

A demonstration of the N. Y. Giants football technique, in one of the shorts, gives local collegiates their opportunity to express their admiration for former George Washington University player Tuffy Leemans. Football is better understood after seeing this picture. There is a very beautiful travelogue entitled "Bermuda, Isles of Paradise." It is in color. And completing the show, there is an amusing screen novelty called "Find What's Wrong," and a color cartoon "The Frog Pond."

By Nelson B. Bell

Executed with that completeness of artistic detail that characterizes so many of the foremost of the foreign film productions that find their way to the screens of America, "Life Dances On," accorded its premiere Washington showing at the Little Theater yesterday, presents a great diversity of scene and characterization and a correspondingly wide breadth of entertainment.

The plan and movement of the narrative are simple and direct and not unfamiliar, save as the skill of Director Julien Duvivier has brought new sharpness and brilliance to an episodic form. It is understandable that Mons. Duvivier, through the deftness of his treatment, should have been awarded the grand prize at the Venice Exposition, where it was presented under the title of "Un Carnet de Bal" for the "best picture produced anywhere in 1937."

As has been previously set forth on this page, the kaleidoscopic drama in "Life Dances On" brings back to mind Walter Browne's "morality play" of "Everywoman, and Her Quest for Happiness." It is motivated by a beautiful young widow's search for the young men who, many years before, had written their names on her dance program at her first ball, cherished in memory as the most glamorous and romantic experience of her life—as such things are apt to be at the age of 16.

The Ironies of Time

The first youth she seeks out proves to have committed suicide as a result of an infatuation that seemed to him hopeless, leaving his mother the demented wreck of a great grief; another has become a monk, whose life is dedicated to developing a boys choir, instead of to a brilliant career as composer and concert pianist; the young law student has turned his gifts into criminal channels as leader of a gang of robbers and killers, under the shallow masquerade of a successful night club proprietor; still another, the medical student, has become an epileptic derelict of the quays, intent upon becoming a ship's doctor to rid himself of a shrew of a wife. And so on through the list of those youthful dancing partners, until she encounters the young comedian who has become a beautician, with an acute addiction to card tricks. With him she attends another dance, identical with the one that lingers so glowingly in her memory, only to find it a drab and utterly commonplace village dance, bereft of all the shimmering beauty and romance with which the passing years had adorned it in her mind.

Returning to her palatial villa, she learns from her staunchest friend and guiding mentor that her one true love has lived for years, unknown to her, just across the lake. Hastening to his nearby home, she learns of his recent death and finds only his young son with whom to share her sorrow. Her happiness, she finds, does not lie in the imaginary glories of a disillusioned past, but in the life that lies ahead, with its richer promise of sounder values than the romanticisms of impressionable girlhood.

Played by French Stars

A notable array of French artists appear in the principal roles of this progressive study in the startling alchemies of time. Marie Bell, one of the beauties of the Comedie Francais, is making her debut to American audiences as the young widow in search of the youths who vowed on the night of her first dance theat they would love her forever. Among those better known are Harry Baur, remembered for "The Golem," "Poil de Carrotte," "Les Miserables" and other prime works; "Francoise Rosay," prominent in "La Kermesse Heroique;" Louis Jouvet, of "The Lower Depths;" Pierre Blanchard, "Crime et Chatiment," and Pierre-Richard Willm.

Although spoken entirely in French, the full measure of the play's humor, pathos, drama and tragedy is conveyed to the audience by especially complete and illuminating superimposed subtitles in English. "Life Dances On" takes its immediate place among the most distinguished of the imported films the Little Theater has presented.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 16.—I admire and agree with practically everything my co-worker, E. V. Durling, writes but when he states only three actresses in Hollywood know how to play love scenes — Miriam Hopkins, Genevieve Tobin and Greta Garbo—then I disagree violently. Greta, yes. She concentrates. Tobin's British accent always get in the way. And Hopkins, whom I like very much, is on the frididaire side.

HEDDA HOPPER

My choice would be: Bette Davis, Dannielle Darrieux, Janet Gaynor, Jean Arthur, Merle Oberon, Margaret Sullavan and Claire Trevor.

I might just as well clean up on the men, too: Charles Boyer, Clark Gable, Tyrone Power, Gary Cooper, Robert Taylor, Herbert Marshall, Ronald Colman, Robert Donat and Errol Flynn. Those foreign boys seem to have the edge on us. Wonder if they've had more practice.

Looks as though Jimmy Cagney goes back to Martha's Vineyard to escape Hollywood goats. Here, he owns two and has to drink their milk—doctor's orders. Mae Murray takes it for beauty's sake. Poor Jimmy's taking an awful kidding with his long hair, home grown specially for "Oklahoma Kid." He could do that upswing our female stars complain about and he doesn't have to go to a beauty parlor for that shade of red which you'll see. Picture's in Technicolor.

Wonder if it was that swift slap Bonita Granville got in "These Three"—incidentally, she suggested it herself—which has developed her into one of our nicest young ladies in "Ellen Drew."

• • • •

Now it looks as though Henry Fonda had been chosen for that Jimmy Stewart type part in the new Lubitsch picture. They sent scouts all over the country for new faces, but won't take a chance when they find them.

• • • •

Patricia Morrison, who's doing "Persons in Hiding" for Paramount, won't have to live up to that title when the fans see her. She's cute as Christmas.

• • • •

Irene Dunne will be needing another vacation when her present picture rush is over. She now is doing "Love Match" with Charles Boyer, goes into "Invitation to Happiness" with Fred MacMurray at Paramount, then plays "Barbara Hutton" under Director John Stahl. You know what that means—a career in itself.

• • • •

Errol Flynn's excellent in "The Sisters," but there's a lot of grumbling because he's starred ahead of Bette Davis. Henry Travers deserved a better part than father in "The Sisters." He's getting it in "Dark Victory."

• • • •

If we're not careful, we'll be packed in ice and put away in storage. On November 1, the "Ice Follies" gives way to Sonja Henie and her troupe. On screen you'll be seeing Metro's "Ice Follies," Twentieth Century's Sonja picture, Eddie Small's "Duke of West Joint" and Clark Gable in "The Great Canadian." If all those blades don't put us on edge, I don't know what will.

 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Oct. 16.—Your correspondent has been putting a large and floppy but sensitive ear to the ground these past few days, and we have detected rumblings of a baseball trade that involves the Detroit club and Mr. Clark Griffith's Nats.

POVICH.

It seems that the Tigers are on the make, and they are seeking no less than Cecil Travis, the fifth leading hitter in the American League last season. With Travis in his infield. Manager Del Baker visions a powerful stride toward breaking the pennant monopoly of the Yankees. He is prepared to make the Washington club a staggering offer comprised of a huge wad of Mr. Walter O. Briggs money and a ball player or two.

This may be news to Mr. Griffith. And again it may not. Because the Washington owner perhaps was preparing for just such an offer when, 10 days ago, he dipped into the draft list and plucked Shortstop Charley Gelbert from the Toledo club at the $7,500 draft price.

A Bit Surprising

That was a bit surprising on the part of Mr. Griffith, because it seemed that among the items the Washington club did not need was a shortstop. Travis, in 1938, had a sensational season in the field as well as at bat and was thoroughly acceptable as a shortstop.

That Gelbert was bought only for utility purposes would seem a bit strange, too, because the Nats happened o have in Mr. Ossi Bluege the finest of all utility infielders. So your correspondent's sensitive nostrils detect something in the wind.

If Manager Del Baker of the Tigers is not prepared to bid for Travis then his actions during the past few days have been strange indeed. Because he has made it a point to inquire deeply into the state of Travis' once-injured knee and to ascertain also Travis' receptiveness to a job with the Detroit club.

Baker, of course, has not talked to Travis. That would come under the head of "tampering," which is rigidly forbidden by the big league rules. But he has gone so far as to talk at great length with another Washington ball player who is wintering near Detroit and to say that the Tigers would go high for Travis.

Ordinarily a chap like Travis, acceptable enough as a fielder, and long-established as one of the best hitters in the big league, would be an untouchable as far as trade or sale is concerned. But none of Mr. Griffith's ball players are sacred with him. He has often said.

"I will make any trade that will benefit our ball club," the Nats' owner has declared repeatedly. And he confirmed that declaration back in 1934 when he sold his foster son-in-law, Joe Cronin, to the Red Sox for a quarter of a million dollars.

If the Tigers make it interesting enough for Griffith there is no doubt that he would part with Travis or any other of his athletes. The Nats' owner is in something of a dither to improve his pitching staff and he certainly will demand the inclusion of one or two Detroit pitchers in any trade for Travis.

The Reason

Mr. Griffith waxed highly enthusiastic about Gelbert when he called him in the draft meeting during the late World Series, pointing out that he had made a sensational comeback with Toledo last season, and that he is only 28 years old. Gelbert is regarded as the superior of Travis as a fielder.

The Tigers' sudden interest in Travis spawns from the failure of their shortstop, Bill Rogell, to provide the same steady play that marked his efforts during the pennant-winning years of 1934-35. Last spring, Mickey Cochrane was intent on a successor for Rogell and believed he had found the man, only to receive a cruel setback when Rookies Frank Croucher suffered a broken leg in spring training.

The rub in the deal may be that none of the Tigers' pitchers except Tommy Bridges would be acceptable to Griffith. The Old Fox has long had a fondness for Elden Auker, the under-hand hurler, but it is doubtful if he would be willing to gamble on any other member of the Tigers' staff except Bridges.

When the deal is broached to Griffith, as it undoubtedly will be at the December meeting of the big leauges in New York, the Nats' owner is also expected to hold out for Outfielder Pete Fox. He wants another right-handed hitter in his outfield to team with George Case and Taft Wright, and Al Simmons, as you know, is nongrata with him.

I'm not predicting anything, though. I just thought I'd pass along an item that appears to have possibilities. One thing, however, is certain. The Tigers do want Travis and it's their move.

Milwaukee, Oct. 16.—The Green Bay Packers smashed and passed their way to a 35-to-7 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in a National professional League game played in midsummer heat here today before a crowd of 13,000.

The Wisconsin team opened with a terrific drive and scored before the game was five minutes old. From that time on, Brooklyn never had a chance as the Packers, playing their best football of the year, ripped the Easterners' line to shreds and passed all over the field.

The first score came on five plays, with Cecil Isbell tossing to Joe Laws for the counter. Tiny Engebretsen kicked the extra point. The next score came on a plunge by Clarke Hinkle from the 1-yard line. Hinkle converted. Broklyn scored in the second period, on a pass from "Ace" Parker to Barrett for 11 yards. Parker's kick was good.

The Packers added another touchdown in the second period, on a 14-yard run by Andy Uram. Don Hutson kicked the extra point. A pass from Isbell to Hutson, for 33 yards, chalked up another Bay marker in the third period, and again Hinkle converted. Bob Monnett passed to Berny Scherer, Bay end, for 22 yards and the final touchdown. Hinkle made good the point.

Md. Turf Writers To Stage Frolic

Upward of 1,000 racing folk, gathered for the climax of the Maryland fall campaign at Pimlico, will be guests of the Maryland Turf Writers Association at their first annual frolic in the ballroom of the Lord Baltimore Hotel, in Baltimore, on Thursday night, November 10, according to plans launched by the racing scribes yesterday.

Track officials, owners, breeders, trainers and jockeys will be included in the list of guests.

The oyster, traditional Maryland delicacy, will be glorified at a huge buffet dinner. Novel entertainment is being drafted for the occasion by the dinner committee of the writers' association. Tickets and reservations will be available from members of the Maryland Turf Writers Association.

Leemans Scores

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—There were more butter fingers than fancy ball-playing at the Polo Grounds today, so the New York Giants took advantage of the situation to trounce the Philadelphia Eagles, 17 to 7, in a National Professional Football League game, before a crowd of 33,187.

Both Giant touchdowns, as well as the Eagles' lone tally, were the direct results of fumbles. The odd 3-point game came on a third-quarter, 20-yard field goal by Ward Cuff.

Jay Arnold fumbled one for the Eagles on the Giants' 23 at the start of the second period. The Veteral Bull Karcis, who was a large ball of fire all afternoon, recovered the ball and galloped 76 yards for New York's first score. Late in the same period Philadelphia's Dave Smukler fumbled on his own 22 and Arkansas Jim Howell recovered it.

Hank Soar fumbled for the Giants on his own 25 midway of the third period and Emmett Mortell recovered for Philadelphia. Three plays later, Mortell heaved a 34-yard pass to Elwood Dow in the left corner, and Philadelphia had its touchdown.

The line-ups:

Philadelphia.	Position.	New York.

New York scoring: Touchdowns—Karcis (sub for Soar), Leemans (sub for Shaffer). Points from try after touchdown—Cuff (2) (place kicks). Field goal—Cuff (place kick). Philadelphia scoring: Touchdown—Dow. Point from try after touchdown—Reese (sub for Harper) (place kick).

Phil Furr Headlines Ring Show

Tackles Pimpanelli
Foe Is Tough
Their Third Fight
Home to Stay

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Phil Furr, the wandering welterweight, meets up with an old acquaintance tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging young Vincent Pimpanelli, of New York, in the feature bout of the program. Advertised as a ten-rounder, the argument figures to go the full distance, and the sporting element is referring to it as an even-money proposition.

It will be the third debate between the combatants, in a series that rapidly is assuming the proportions of another Leonard-Tendler feud. Furr, in this instance, is enacting the Tendler role, having dropped two consecutive decisions to the Italian at the Carnarsie Arena, Brooklyn.

We have Phils' own word, bolstered by innumerable customers' opinions, however, that the ballot box was stuffed for the first bout, and that Pimpanelli had an uncle on the jury and a cousin refereeing the second time. Furr, at any rate, infers that Pimpanelli won a couple of those disputed decisions and that he "wus robbed" in the fullest meaning of that choice old ring phrase.

Furr's Ready

Be that as it may, Furr eloquently promises to reduce his rival to a heap of fine old Italian pulp tonight for the edification of his home-town cronies. He is ready, he admits, for a battle that easily may decide his fistic future in this neck of the woods. After dropping the nod to George Abrams earlier in the summer, Phil can ill afford to lose tonight, and is fully aware of the consequences that will follow defeat.

Furr is home to stay, he vows, having had his fill of travel, fighting at whistle stops, before hostile audiences, in the glare of bright city lights ,and constantly on the jump. He has gone a long way since that thrill-drenched night at the old and often-yearned-for Riding and Hunt Club, where he fought Frankie Petrolle in his first main bout.

Petrolle was the first ringman to put Phil on the carpet, but Furr got up twice that night, dusted off his neatly pressed panties, and proceeded to dust off Mr. Petrolle with one of the most exciting comebacks ever witnessed. Later on he knocked out Ray Bowen, he of the cut-glass chin who since has taken to refereeing.

Remember Wilson?

Still later he ran out on blond Bob Wilson, and disappeared in a storm of civic protests that he stand up and fight the hard-hooking Wilson or be banished from the ring. Where Furr disappeared to has always remained a mystery, but back he came, eventually, to fight and whip Wilson before an audience calling belligerently for Phillip's scalp.

Then he set out for the Coast, fame and fortune, and succeeded in wringing some small measure of national recognition from his exploits. The press wires hummed the night he stood ten blistering rounds with Ceferino Garcia in Hollywood, when the Filipino was knocking out everybody sent against him. That one night proved Furr's true ability as a fighter, and offers poured in to him.

Somewhat of a throwback to Furr's run-out on Wilson was Steve Mamakos' run-out on Furr this past week, for it was the durable Greek Phil was matched with originally. But with the signing of Pimpanelli, a good, rough and young puncher, Mamakos' absence will not be noticeable. Furr figures to box the ears off the Greek, but tonight he may emerge on the short end of the count.

The supporting card includes three six-rounders between Joe Sole and Pancho Huerta; El Brookman and Joey Spangler; Jerry Hall and Eddie Saugsted, and a four-round inaugural between Jay Thomas and Joe Chaney.

Washington Cycle Star Sets Record

Cauffman Winner
Takes 15-Mile Title
Gugler Is Second
Betty Sweeney Wins

Eighteen-year-old Billy Cauffman, of the National Capital Wheelmen, set a world's A. A. U. record yesterday in winning the open feature 15-mile sprint race of the fourth annual National Capital bicycle sweepstakes held on the Ellipse.

Off to a fast start, the bespectacled youth whizzed around the course in 46 minutes, 11 6-10 seconds to clip more than 12 minutes off the old standard, set in last year's race, as a crowd of 8,000 fans cheered.

Second to the furiously pedaling Cauffman was Furman Gugler, of the Plainville Wheelmen who crossed the line in 47 minutes 1 6-10 seconds. Otto Corbini, 1937 winner, placed third in 47 minutes 2 seconds.

Cauffman Wins Again

Not content with taking down the feature event, Cauffman added a first place in the two-mile senior race and received for his day's work two bicycles, a silver trophy, one gold medal and one silver medal.

he National Wheelmen produced another winner when Jimmy Strachan came home first in the 3-mile handicap, an event for Washington riders only. His time of eight minutes 53 4-10 seconds was considered fast.

Betty Sweeney, although she could not match the pace of Doris Kopsky, former Olympic star, upheld the prestige of the National Capital Wheelmen's fair sex by scoring a first place in the 1-mile event for Washington girls only and third positions in both the 3-mile open and 2-mile open events.

Miss Kopsky Wins

Miss Kopsky won the latter two races in contrasting style. Her winning time of 12 minutes 43 4-10 seconds in the 3-mile race was the slowest ever recorded in the four years of competition in the event. But her time of 31 minutes 31 4-10 seconds in the shorter race was unusually fast.

Cardinals Rally With Aerial Barrage
Victory Is Bears' Fourth of Season

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—The Chicago Bears ran up a 34-to-14 lead over their city rivals, the Cardinals, today and then had to stave off a furious passing offensive to snare a 34-to-28 National Professional football victory.

A crowd of 21,614 saw the thriller, the Bears' fourth triumph of the season.

The Cards scored first on Ray Parker's plunge after a 58-yard march. Two 50-yard passes by Bernie Masterson then set off the Bears, Ray Nolting scoring on one and the other setting the stage for Sam Francis to plunge over. In the last few seconds of the first half, Dick Bassi, Bear guard, grabbed a Card fumble and raced 63 yards to score.

A pass good for 47 yards, Masterson to Dick Plasman, yielded a fourth Bear touchdown and a 27-to-7 lead as the last half opened. Then came a flurry of Card aerials by Dwight Sloan, Pat Coffee and Jack Robbins.

Sloan's pass to Bill Smith made the score 27 to 14. The Bears retaliated with their final marker on Joe Maniaci's 10-yard sprint. Jack Robbins uncorked a 23-yard touchdown heave to Frank Patrick and in the final period interference gave the Cards the ball on the Bears' 1-yard line, from where Sam Agee plunged over. A final Card drive ended on the 14-yard line with a pass interception.

Hi-Ho Takes Indian Spring Show Crown

Crack jumpers of the District and Maryland teams which will compete in the Inter-American Horse Show, starting Thursday, had a good preparatory workout yesterday at the Indian Spring Hunt Club's show on the Indian Spring Valley Farm.

Nineteen-year-old Lisbeth Steig, just one year removed from the junior ranks, won the show championship with her Hi-Ho, barely nosing out Fenton Fadeley jr.'s renowned Laquer Lady, top jumper of the Maryland team.

Laquer Lady, incidentally, was involved in one of four spills which marred the show and brought possible serious injury to June Curran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marrian D. Curran, of Four Corners, Md.

Miss Curran was thrown to the ground when her mount, Nancy Steele, with which she had just won the junior horsemanship prize, was bumped by Tipperary Mary, ridden by Frank Christmas. Miss Curran was examined on the scene by Dr. Francis X. Richardson, who said he feared she might have suffered a fractured spine.

The girl was taken to her home. X-rays will be made today.

Laquer Lady, main hope of the Maryland team in the Inter-American event, apparently escaped injury when she stumbled taking a jump in the working hunters class. A veternarian examined the horse and announced she probably would be ready Thursday.

Fadely, riding Laquer Lady, was not so fortunate, however, for he re-

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Oct. 16.—Bottle-legged little Andy Farkas came back to his home town today, clothed in the regalia of professional football, and on the scene of his college triumphs he fashioned for the Washington Redskins a 7-5 victory over the Detroit Lions.

With the guilt of a first-quarter safety threatening to sour his first appearance as a professional before Detroit fans, Farkas bounced back in the third period and scored a sensational touchdown that lifted the Redskins to victory.

In that first quarter he had stupidly run the ball back into the end zone to give the Lions a safety and improve their lead to 5-0. But five minutes after the start of the second half, Farkas had redeemed himself, the ball snuggled close to his chest as he lay across the goal line.

Before 42,855 sweltering fans, the largest crowd in Detroit's football history, the Redskins seized upon a sudden break in the game and pursued it for the winning touchdown.

That break was precipitated by Wee Willie Wilkin, 240-pound tackle, who burst through the Detroit line as Vernon Huffman attempted to get away a punt deep in his own territory. With a fierce assault on Ace Gutowsky, who was attempting to block for Huffman, Wilkin juggernauted Gutowsky into th epath of the kick, which bounced off the blocker's helmet and slithered outside on the Lions' 17-yard line where the Redskins took possession.

From that point the Redskins struck quickly. Bill Hartman cracked the Lions' line for 2 yards. Then he dropped back to pass. Rushed, he got off a wobbly heave into the flat zone and the play appeared incomplete.

And then suddenly a stocky figure dashed for the ball, snared it with a shoestring catch. It was Farkas and his legs began to chug goalward even as he took the ball. To the 7-yard line he bucked and wriggled for a first down.

Finishes the Job

On the next play it was Farkas again, this time on a slash at the right tackle. Ricocheting off the tacklers in the secondary he was not checked until he reached the 1-foot line. On the next play it was Farkas again at right tackle but this time he was stopped by Huffman, 6 inches from the goal. On the next play Farkas went over.

Riley Smith, in the Redskin lineup for the first time this season place-kicked the extra point and the Redskins had a 7-to-5 lead and, as it developed, the ball game.

In the other statistics except the final score, the Redskins did not fare so well. Only nine first downs they gained to 11 for the Lions, only 78 yards by rushing to the Lions' 233. Big Bill Shepherd, Leroy Cardwell and Ace Gutowsky led a bone-crushing running attack that clipped off vast yardage between the 20-yard lines, but foundered before a bristling Redskin defense when pay dirt neared.

But the Redskins were always faced with the power of the Lions' attack and with the clock showing only 30 seconds to play the Lions made one desperate bid for victory via a field goal.

Back on his 37-yard line, Regis Monahan, who booted a 30-yard placement in the opening quarter, tried again in that last minute of play. But Bob McChesney led a wave of blockers into the path of Monahan's boot and the Redskins were out of danger.

Breaks for Lions

Sammy Baugh's passes played no part in the Redskins' victory, but Detroit fans did get an impressive if brief glimpse of Slingin' Sammy in the second quarter when the Redskins, fighting to overtake the Lions' 5-0 lead, began a march upfield.

Baugh unloosed a spectacular 29-yard pass to Riley Smith, and then he completed a pass to McChesney on the Lions' 10-line, but offside play nullified it. Three more passes in a row he completed to Millner, McChesney and Millner again for a first down on the Lions' 25, but the charge foundered when Shepherd intercepted a fourth-down pass in the end zone.

Two kindly breaks in the game attended the first-quarter field goal that set the Lions up in a 3-0 lead. A 20-yard pass from Huffman to Morse helped to carry the ball to the Redskins' 29, and on fourth down Monahan attempted a field goal. It was wide, but McChesney was detected offside. Again Monahan tried a placement and again it was wide, but offside play by both teams gave the Lions a reprieve.

For the third time Monahan

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Merrily We Roll Along

New York, Oct. 16.—Ig you saw the Yale-Columbia game at New Haven a couple of weeks ago, you will remember how the Blue scored its first touchdown. It resulted from a blocked kick. You may also have noticed that after the play Sid Luckman, the Columbia kicker, walked over to the referee and seemed to be making some complaint.

VIDMER.

The other night I ran into Red Friesell, the official in that game, and just out of curiosity asked him what Luckman was saying.

"Oh, he wasn't complaining," Red laughed. "The whole Yale line came down on him, if you remember, and he came over to me and said

"'We don't need a referee down here so much as a cop—to keep that crowd back!'"

Clarence Buddington Kelland, who has written a lot of things besides "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was sitting in on a football fanning bee during the World sSeries, listening to the palms and plaudits being distributed. But when the subject got around to the great centers, he spoke up.

"The greatest center who ever played was Dutch Shultz of Michigan," he said in a tone of finality. "He could do everything. He never made a bad pass, he was the first man down the field under punts, and how he could back up that line on the defense! Why he made tackles all over the place. He covered so much territory that one time Michigan was playing Illinois and old Dutch made a tackle in Wisconsin!"

A great deal of Brown's sudden success this year is due to the wonderful blocking of Tuss McLaughry's son, John. He's a fine ball carrier and a brilliant defensive back, but the best thing he does is block for the other runners. His explanation of how he got that way is interesting.

"When I was a kid I used to hear my father come home after Brown had lost a game and moan about the inability of his players to block," young John says. "'If I just had a good blocker. That's all I need. But everybody wants to carry the ball', he would wail. And right then I decided that when I grew up I was going to be a blocker, whatever that meant. When I found out I concentrated on being a good one."

Someone sitting around the Hippodrome was telling about the fight manager who wanted to see if his boy could go the distance.

"No, not the first," said his manager. "Take it easy for a while."

After the round the fighter returned to his corner and said: "I can finish this guy in short order. Maybe I better knock him out in this one, eh?"

"Take your time, take your time," the manager ordered. "Just coast along a few rounds."

It was the same before the third, fourth and fifth. The fighter kept asking if he should finish it and the manager kept telling him to hold back. And then in the sixth it happened. The other fellow cut loose, knocked the fighter flat a few times, cut his eyes and mouth and sent him reeling to his corner at the bell.

"Maybe I shoulda got him earlier, eh? While he was alone."

And John Lagatta, the illustrator, was telling about a friend of his who had a hot hunch at the track. It seems this fellow hadn't been doing so well coming down to the last race. But there he figured to recoup his losses and come away with a profit, as all horse players do.

Looking over the entries for the seventh race he found a horse named Verdict. Seventh race, seven letters, and looking in his pocket he found just seven dollars. That clinched it.

"And how did he make out?"

D. C. High School Football On Way To Best Season in Years

Attendance Rises for First Games

Finances Better
Tech Draws Crowds
Big Year Seen
2 Games Tomorrow

The guiding fathers of public high school football look forward with something akin to optimism today as the first two weeks and the first five games of the inter-high series are written on the books in black ink for a change.

Leonard T. Brown, chairman of the high school football committee, last night released figures which not only show that schoolboy football is bringing in cash, but that it may be expected to pay for itself this season.

In the five games played, a total of $371.90 rolled into the coffers, constituting an increase of more than $100 over the intake of the first five games in 1937. The $371.90 includes cash taken in at the games only, and not proceeds from the sale of student tickets.

Attendance figures, never a matter of more than three digits last year, also show a gain, the Eastern-McKinley contest last Friday far and away the best attended of the year. A grand total of 5,098 has been on hand for the five games, Eastern's clash with Tech accounting for 1,677 of them and the Tech-Roosevelt running second with 1,102. The least attended was Anacostia's second game, with Western. Only 469 went through the turnstiles.

In the matter of money, the Eastern-Tech game also set a high mark for the season. The gatekeeper took in $157 to almost double the proceeds from any previous tilt. The first game of the season, a postponed battle between Anacostia and Wilson, furnished the least gate; a mere $36.

Mr. Brown gave as his opinion that the interhigh series would draw at least $300 more in gates than it did in 1937. The poor showing last year, he said, was caused by rain washing out two of the most important clashes.

McKinley High leads in the standings as well as gate attraction as the third week of the series starts. It does not play again until October 25, and other teams probably breathe easier with the chance to catch up.

Two games are carded for tomorrow, Central's second-place aggregation meeting Anacostia at Eastern Stadium, while Eastern moves over to Western to play Woodrow Wilson. Both games start at 3:30.

Standings

Team.	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
McKinley	2	0	0	1.000

kicked, and this time he didn't miss.

The game continued in its freakish style after the two teams lined up for the next kickoff. Farkas, after recovering his own fumble of the kickoff in front of the goal posts, touched the ball down, thinking that the posts were 10 yards behind the goal line, as in college football. When he saw his mistake he attempted to circle behind the goal and run the ball out, he was smothered by Huffman for a safety.

George Karamatic contributed little to the Redskins' attack today, but he was a powerful figure in the third quarter when Kent Ryan, breaking away around right end, galloped 65 yards and apparently was headed for a touchdown when Karamatic, evading a blocker, overtook him from behind and ran him outside.

A cohero with Karamatic on the defense was Substitute End Bob Masterson, who, with the Lions threatening on the 10-yard line at the start of the fourth quarter and needing only a yard for first down, broke through and smeared Gutowsky for no gain to bring the threat to a halt.

Late in the fourth quarter it was the Redskins who were threatening again, thanks to a superb kick by Sammy Baugh, whose punt from the 50-yard line curled up and rolled outside on the Lions' 2½-yard stripe.

Passing from behind his own goal, Huffman's heave fell into the hands of Charley Malone on the Lions' 5 and another Redskin touchdown appeared imminent, but Irwin on three bucks at the line made only 2 yards.

An attempted triple pass from Baugh to Smith to Malone was incomplete in the end zone.

Archibald Eyes Title

Meets Belloise
6,000 Expected
Both Seek Crown

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 16.—At least a part of the confusion that followed Henry Armstrong's decision to abandon the world featherweight championship and concentrate upon defending his other two titles, should be cleared up tomorrow night.

ARCHIBALD

Mike Belloise, of New York, who once was recognized as champion in New York, and Joey Archibald, of Pawtucket, R. I., the No. 1 contender on the National Boxing Association list, are due to fight it out over the 15-round route at St. Nicholas Palace. The New York State Athletic Commission has promised to recognize the winner as champion, but the N. B. A. doesn't concur.

At any rate, no one is likely to win full title recognition without beating the winner of tomorrow's scrap, and, as a result, a capacity house of 6,000 is expected to be on hand for the doings.

Archibald beat Belloise at Washington a couple of months ago, but Mike has been making a brilliant comeback after a siege of illness and is given a good chance to reverse that decision.

Brookland Ahead

The Brookland 135-pound football team yesterday defeated Seat Pleasant, 20-18, at Turkey Thicket field.

Whew! Some Scores

That Princeton's early scores were not small is seen from the fact that she defeated Lafayette 140-0 in 1884; and managed to eke out a 115-0 victory over Virginia in 1890.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Laurel.

Trainer Roy Waldron is busy these days pointing Dinner Date, juvenile ace of the Milky Way Farm, for next Saturday's $10,000 added Selmia Stakes. Winner of the Matron Stakes at Belmont and the Spinway Stakes at Saratoga, Dinner Date is a filly of rare speed. She meets her own sex in the Selima and Waldron hopes to see her repeat the stable's success of Talma Dee, the long shot that led every step of the way in 1936 at long odds. She seems capable of going the mile and, despite her sex, she may be entered in the Kentucky Derby next year. James Butler, principal owner of this track, is confined to a New York hospital with a broken leg. Apprentice George Witmer loses his "bug" and becomes a full-fledged rider as soon as he boots home five more winners. He is considering a job with M. R. Waugh, whose horses will be shipped to New Orleans this winter. Witmer's extreme light weight puts him in demand. Dr. H. P. Langdon, of Charles Town, was down to see last Saturday's stake. Whitey Abel has turned Company Halt out for a rest on Alan Clarke's Huntington Farm. Company Halt failed to strike top form here. Charlie McLennan, racing secretary, arrived at Pimlico yesterday to make way for the coming meeting. Pimlico is being swamped with applications for reserved seats for the War Admiral-Seabiscuit race. Jacola, winner of the Selima Stakes last year and victor over Seabiscuit last Saturday, is the favorite for the $7,500 Maryland Handicap next Saturday. Weights for the $5,000 added Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap show Aniball and Ossabaw, owned by Tommy Hitchcock, sharing the top assignment of 160 pounds. BILL.

First race—Nancy Sweet was not prominent in the Richard Johnson Stakes. Previous to that race she won an allowance even and seems nicely placed in this company. Bib Hurry, winner of his last two, is at tops and dangerous among these. Ebony Blue was a good filly in New England.

Second race—Prattler won two jumping events here. Needs only to keep on his feet to down these. The entry of Little Woman and Valpulseaux seems to have a good grip grip on second money. Little Woman won here in her last and the stablemate did well. Bellman to take care of the others.

Third race—Felsun raced greenly behind top line opposition in New York and has worked well for this. Chatabit was a beaten favorite last out and finished second. Dangerous in this field. Critt has closing ability and may be underrated.

Fourth race—Lenpola ran out at the stretch turn when in excellent position last out. This field suits and with better racing luck I look forward to a set of brackets. Dixieland is favored by conditions in this and has moved well in allowance company. Happy Knot moves up after a winning performance.

Fifth race—Conquer downed better horses last out and I see no reason for mistakes. Two Bob has been hiding and may awaken to take second money among these. Lady Maryland was a close, driving third here last week.

Sixth race—Purple King set the pace for a mile in the Lawrence Realization and I'm forced to string along in this. Roseretter will be close if away more alertly than in that last. Kayak II beat a good field last week.

Seventh race—Golden Vein was off badly in that last. Appears to be sound and gets my call. Jungo drops back in company that suits. Absconder was second in fair company at Washingtn Park.

Eighth race—Schley Nurse deserves top position here on recent good form. Wispy may be better than generally rated. Package has a money chance

Best bet—Conquer.

Triumphant Colonial Grid Team Returns

Reinhart Happy Over Saturday's Triumph
Altitude and Heat Bother Local Club
Look Forward to Game With Mississippi

En Route to Washington, Oct. 17.—George Washington University's surprising eleven, undefeated and unscored on in three games, reaches home tonight after a successful invasion of the Rocky Mountain area and tomorrow resumes practice for its game on Friday night with Davis and Elkins.

Highly pleased with the play of the Colonials to date, Coach Bill Reinhart is looking past Davis and Elkins, however, to October 28 when the powerful University of Mississippi team comes to Washington as George Washington's next major opponent.

Under adverse conditions the G. W. team again displayed a strong, sharp running attack and a powerful line in defeating Colorado 13-0. The Colonials ran into a hot weather and high altitude combination which greatly reduced their effectiveness after the first period. Most of the crowd was comfortable in shirt sleeves.

G. W.'s line held up defensively despite the circumstances, but the forwards breathing with difficulty most of the game, were unable to open the gaping holes which marked the first quarter drive on which Vic Sampson scored. At that the Colonials piled up 219 yards gain on the ground to 78 for their opponents. In their last two games the Buff boys have accumulated 542 yards on running plays. Their average for the season is 216 yards per game to 59 for their opponents.

In addition to the stout play of the line and Vic Sampson's great all-around backfield exhibition, John Tonkavitch's 59-yard run for G. W.'s second touchdown was the highlight of the game. A stubby, powerful sophomore fullback, Tonkavitch's fine piece of running was made possible by Sampson's great block on the Colorado safety.

The Colonials' pass defense yielded the first completions of the season but Colorado completed only 2 of 16 passes for 29 yards gain.

Post Scripts

What's in a name? Sometimes as much as $40 as Lewis F. Atchison of The Post Sports Staff learned to his sorrow last Thursday. Lewis F., known to his friends as "Tony," passed up a namesake horse in the sixth at Laurel to play Monument, a red-hot tip according to a fellow on speaking terms with the nag. Well, Tony came tearing up the home stretch, passed Monument and paid $40 . . .

Those who played this column's upsetpredictions Saturday realized profit on Maryland, Navy and Colgate, losing only on Michigan . . . Georgetown now has ammassed 117 points in three games which puts them well up among the Nation's high-scoring leaders for a similiar number of contests. But how much better the Hoyas' record would look if it could show even one victory against a first-rate opponent. Playing three teams of the caliber of Hampden-Sydney, Roanoke and Randolph-Macon never added to any team's prestige and certainly never helped at the gate. Georgetown drew less than 10,000 persons to those games. George Washington, with a team of about the same strength, for instance, drew 10,000 for the Furman game and 8,000 more to watch it play Butler. Georgetown fans argue, of course, that Georgetown's unusually young squad should be brought along slowly. Yes, but it's a long jump from Randolph-Macon to Manhattan. The Georgetown players, as anyone who saw Saturday's game, knowns, are wearied of running over weak opposition and there's just a chance that they won't be able to view Manhattan with the respect that the Jaspers warrant.

Congratulations to Frank Dobson and his Maryland for their victory over Western Maryland. It was a great victory for the Terps, not that the Terrors are better than average opposition but because any team that can fight back after the misfortune that has dogged Maryland deserves a hand . . . Nomination to the local coach turning in the best coaching job goes to G. W.'s Bill Reinhart who has wrought wonders with a Colonial squad, rated behind Georgetown, Maryland and Catholic University in pre-season calculations. The Colonials' today boast the most impressive record of the "big four."

JACK MUNHALL.

L. I. Terrier Wins Honors At Annapolis

Nornay Saddler Scores
Traveller a Victor
1,000 Watch Events
200 Dogs Compete

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 16.—Nornay Sadler, a finely formed and well trained fox terrier, from the Wissaboo Kennels, of Long Island, N. Y., today was adjudged best of the show at the St. Margaret's Hunt Club on the grounds of the Annapolis Baseball Club, near this city.

More than 200 exhibitors showed over 400 dogs, with the attendance exceeding 1,000. Dogs of every show breed were on and the show was successful in every detail.

The final competition for "best dog" was won by the Long Island fox terrier in competition with a wolf hound, and English setter, a boxer, a Boston bull terrier and a Pekinese, all nearly perfect dogs of their breed. The services of all of the judges were called to this competition, which was made with the utmost care.

The feature race of the six whippets brought together the fastest dogs of this section, and was won by Tarveller, belonging to H. H. Nicholson, wh covered the course of 105 yards in 6 4-5 seconds.

The judges for the show were William E. Seidewitz, Charles M. Canedy, Leroy Skillman, Samuel T. Brickhard, and Mrs. Bolling Barton, while Dr. Charles L. McAnulty was brought in as a special judge in the "best dog" competitions. Summary:

Von Cramm Released

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 16.—Baron Gottfried von Cramm, German tennis ace, was released on parole today from Lehrterstrasse prison where he had almost five months still to serve on a morals charge.

VON CRAMM

The remainder of his one-year sentence, which would have been up next March 7, will be suspended for two years during he "must prove worthy of this act of mercy."

A large automobile awaited Baron von Cramm outside the prison gate and he was whisked off to an undisclosed destination. It was known, however, that he was called for by his brother and it was believed he was taken to his mother's home at Brueggen, near Hanover.

Baron von Cramm was arrested March 5 on his return from a tennis tour of the United States and Australia. He was convicted by a criminal court jury May 14 of improper relations with an 18-year-old Jew, Manasse Herbst, but the two months he had waited in custody for trial were deducted from his term.

In prison he had been doing clerical work and, therefore, was in his cell only at night.

Riot Follows Parsons Victory Over Thomas

Thomas, W. Va., Oct. 16.—The Parsons High School Panthers defeated Thomas High, 6-0, in a Potomac Valley Conference battle here and as soon as the battle terminated, many of the 600 spectators swarmed out on the field and had a first-class riot.

District Pros Upset Virginians, Winning 5 of 6 Matches

McCarthy, Sharkey, Bogart Win Titles

Olmsted Loses, 1 Up
Eddie Bean Bows
Capt. Parks Loser

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Two 18-year-old club champions, Buddy Sharkey at Indian Spring and Ralph Bogart at Army and Navy, were crowned yesterday while at Beaver Dam "Iron Man" Martin F. McCarthy, competing in his second club final in two days, defeated Eddie Bean, 4 and 3. Play was continued in Congressional's ten flights.

INDIAN SPRING

Sharkey won the Indian Spring title for the second year on the final green. The champion and Jock Olmsted played 27 of their 36 holes on Saturday, with Sharkey up at the ninth, one at the turn and three up at the twenty-seventh.

Three pars and a birdie by Olmsted, former Argyle champion, evened the match on the thirteenth, or thirty-first hole. Sharkey won 14 and Olmsted drew even again on 16, with two to play. Things looked bad for the Greogetown freshmen on the seventeenth as Olmsted was 15 feet from the pin and Sharkey 30 feet away in two, but the latter knocked the putt in, Olmsted three-putted, and they halved the last hole, leaving Sharkey the winner.

BEAVER DAM

McCarthy's round of 74-75 was too consistent for Bean, as the former salvaged one title out of his Columbia and Beaver Dam finals on successive days. Bean was up on the third hole for the only time. McCarthy was 2 up at the ninth and retined the margin at the halfway mark.

He picked up a hole to lead 3 up at 27, and won the fifteenth for the 4 and 3 triumph. Bean had 78-77 for his twin rounds. McCarthy, winning the title for the second time, succeeds B. Dennell.

ARMY AND NAVY

A sub-par back line earned Ralph Bogart the title over Capt. F. L. Parks at the Service Club, 4 and 3. The youngest holder of the club crown was out up at the turn with a 39, and, after halving the tenth, won three of the next four holes.

He played the round out and was back in 35 for a 74 with Capt. Parks, who also played in the Columbia tourney, four shots higher.

CONGRESSIONAL

Earl McAleer won the last two holes to defeat R. J. Holland 1 up in the only championship flight match at Congressional. He finished with a birdie and par.

Cox Has Par for 68
Spencer's 3 Wins
Diffenbaugh Tied

Washington's four-man pro golf team surprised some 700 spectators yesterday at Washington and Country Club by trouncing the visiting Virginia all-star quartet, 5½ to ½, in the first half of the $2,000 challenge match. The Virginians need a clean sweep next week at Country Club of Virginia to win the match.

With Wiffy Cox, who won the District Open over the same course two weeks ago cracking par with a 68, including a first nine of 32, the D. C. mentors won all the best ball points and three of the Individual matches, losing only a half point when George Diffenbaugh and Al Houghton split even.

Cox's two under par round was the finest of the day while Cliff Spencer matched regulation figures with a 70, with Leo Walper 71 and Errie Ball, Charlottesville mentor, at the same figure. Cruikshank had par for a 70 but did not play the last hole. All putts were holed.

Dropping four birdie putts on the first nine, Cox led Richmond's Bobby Cruikshank by a two-hole margin, and closed the match on the seventeenth after playing the back nine even. The Congressional had five threes over the route. Playing in the same foursome, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Champ Leo Walper birdied 15 and 17 to take a lead and parred the final hole to win two up over Virginia Open Titleholder Chandler Harper.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam mentor, curled in a tricky 8-foot putt on the home green to win a nip-and-tuck struggle over Errie Ball, Charlottesville pro, who took Medalist Frank Moore to the nineteenth hole in the 1938 P. G. A. George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, led Al Houghton, five-time Maryland Open champion, from Old Point Comfort, two up and as many to play but finished 5-5 and Houghton eked out a halve.

Cox and Walper had a best ball of 65 in defeating Cruikshank and Harper, while Ball and Houghton fell 3 and 2 to Spencer and Diffenbaugh, after being three down at the turn. The winner's needed par for a 66 when the match ended, and Spencer's birdie netted a 65.

Nolan Congratulates McCarron on Congressional's Championship Victory

Congressional's Maryland State Golf Association team champions lined up to receive their trophies after Jack McCarron dropped a 3-foot putt on the final hole to clinch the championship match by 9½ to 8½ over Indian Spring, at Chevy Chase. McCarron and Bill Wenzel needed to win the final hole against Elliott Spicer and Dick Kreuzberg, while the latter team only had to halve it for the match. McCarron's par four was good, as the losers took five. The champions (left to right), Billy Shea, Billy Dettweiler, Claude Rippy, Dr. Howard L. Smith, Team Captain M. Parker Nolan, Louis Fuchs; the hero of the hour, "All Weather" Jack McCarron; Earl McAleer, Frank Goodwin, Gene Pittman and William Wenzel. Professional Cox was playing at Washington ceived a black eye and multiple scratches about his head and eyes.

The most thrilling duel of the afternoon came in the triple bar class when Tom Mott's Bromana, ridden by Judie Johnson, and Fadeley's Laquer Lady staged an overlong battle for the blue ribbon.

Bromana, Laquer Lady, Hi Ho and A. R. Heinrich's Good Friday all had clean performances, making a jump-off necessary, with the bars being extended to a spread of 7 feet.

Hi Ho was eliminated in the first jump-off. With the bars extended to 8 feet, Good Friday fell, spilling his rider, Mrs. Marie Smith. As Laquer Lady and Bromana were still tied, the jumps were raised to 9 feet.

Both had knockdowns on this round and Maj. Eduardo Yanez, of the visiting Chilean Inter-American entry, ordered another jump-off. Bromana had a knockdown on the last jump. Laquer Lady went over clear to win the most closely contested class of the day.

Fenton Fadeley, jr., gained his second leg on the Indian Spring Hunt Club Challeneg Trophy for working hunters when Lisbeth Steig rode his Head Rock to victory for permanent possession of the trophy.

Fred J. Hughes jr's Black Caddy, of the Maryland interstate team, gave an excellent performance in the Handy Hunters Class by completing the course without a fault.

Middleburg Show Set

Middleburg, Va., Oct. 16.—Plans are going forward rapidly for the Middleburg hunter show, which will be held at Glenwood, in the Middleburg hunt country, on Saturday, October 29, beginning at 9:30 a. m. Indications point to a great day of sport, with fine horses, a beautiful pageant and memories revived in the impersonation of famous horses of bygone days.

The pageant, entitled "Queen of the Middleburg Hunt Country," is a feature of the show, and will be called at 12 noon. The queen of the pageant, Anna Lee Trenary, of the Aldie High School, was chosen from the daughters of owners or renters in the Middleburg hunt country by votes in the public schools. Six pages have been chosen, as follows: Ella May Brown and Alice Sutphin, Meddleburg School; Elena Olive, Hilll School; Irene Nicol, Foxcroft School; Eleanor Williams and Louise Feaster, Mountville School. The committee wished to have pages from every school in the hunting country, but there are 19 schools and only roo mfor 8 pages in the pageant.

Another big feature is the "Lest We Forget" class, which will consist of favorite horses of byebone days, or their impersonators. The side-saddle class, in which Mrs. Amory Perkins will present the Journey's End Challenge Bowl, will have followers of many hunts competing. This will be called at 3:30 p. m. The half-century class promises to be a big attraction.

The entries will close on Friday.

Little Wolf Murphy's Foe

Indian Gets Match
At Arena Thursday
Renews Old Feud

Chief Little Wolf, Colorado Indian, has been selected as an opponent for Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy, Boston Irishman, for the semi-windup spot on Thursday's card featuring Jim Londos and Bobby Burns at Turner's Arena.

Little Wolf needs little introduction to Washington mat fans, who need only to recall his struggle with Tiger Nelson to know the type of grappler the Indian Chief is. According to Promoter Turner, Little Wolf and Nelson staged a battle at the Auditorium three years ago that is considered one of the roughest in local wrestling history.

But in Murphy, the Chief will be meeting a real mat stylist. The Bostonian, who was featured some eight times last winter at the Arena, will pit his famous dropkick against the Indian's "death lock," which should make for a pretty interesting session.

Meanwhile reports from Chicago say Bruns, still smarting under the sting of two defeats handed him here by Londos, will be out to "shoot the works." The bare-footed Bruns, 'tis reported, has developed a punishing combination scissors-arm lock that he hopes to employ with telling effect.

Promoter Turner plans to close out for his supporting card today. Some new faces will be in the line-up.

Congressional Wins State Team Crown

McCarron's Putt Decisive
Cox, Team Capt. Nolan Win
Olmsted, Hart Have 67

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Jack McCarron stepped confidently to a 3-foot putt on the eighteenth green at Chevy Chase yesterday with the result of the Maryland State Golf Association team championship in his hands and calmly stroked it in the cup and Congressional was champion again, 9½ to 8½, over Indian Spring.

Five teams were already in with the defending champions leading, 8 to 7. Elliott Spicer and Dick Kreuzberg had won the first nine from McCarron and Bill Wenzel, with Kreuzberg's par on the ninth hole, and were one up on the 18 and even on the back nine. They needed only to halve the hole to win.

But Spicer was in trouble off the tee and Kreuzberg trapped his second. Wenzel was four on the green and out of the hole. The Indian Spring pair putted and missed for their pars, leaving the match in McCarron's hands and "All Weather Jack," one of the finest putters in town, dropped it for the single-point victory.

Wiffy Cox and Parker Nolan, playing in the morning, were through before the other five foursomes played and Congressional was leading 2½ to ½ as Cox and Nolan overcame a 2-up margin on the front nine over Al Jamison and Roger Peacock, and then won the back nine 2 and 1, with Cox firing a 33.

At the nine-hole mark of all matches, the eventual winners were leading, 4½ to 3½, an da one-point decision loomed, for one team or the other. Jocl Olmstead and Jerry Hart finished with a best ball of 67 and upset Earl McAleer and Frank Goodwin, 3 points to 0. The champions jumped to a 3-point lead as Claude Rippy and Louis Fuchs won 2½ points over Lou Harrison and Dick Melvin, the latter team halving the eighteenth to prevent a shutout.

Russ Hollebaugh shipped dead for a 4 and win on the eighteenth to give he and Buddy Sharkey a point against 2 for Billy Shea and Billy Dettweiler. Dr. Smith and Gene Pittman won the back nine from the loser's Capt. Arthur Urban and Eddie Ault, to net a point against two, leaving the score at 8-7 and setting the stage for the final and deciding points by McCarron and Wenzel.

Congressional, 9½; Indian Spring, 8½

Wiffy Cox and M. Parker Nolan (Congressional) defeated Al Jamison and Roser Peacock, 2½ to ½; Jock Olmsted and Jerry Hart (Indian Spring) defeated Earl McAleer and Frank M. Goodwin, jr., 3 points to 0; Claude Rippy and Louis Fuchs (Congressional) defeated Lou Harrison and Dick Melvin, 2½ to ½; Billy Shea and Billy Dettweiler (Congressional) defeated Buddy Sharkey and Russ Hollebaugh, 2 to 1; Arthur Urban and Eddie Ault (Indian Spring) defeated Dr. Howard Smith and Gene Pittman, 2 to 1; Jack McCarron and William Wenzel (Congressional) and Elliott Spicer and Dick Kreuzberg (Indian Spring), all even, 1½ to 1½.

British Bankers See Boom Era Born of Peace Pact, Babson Says

Munich Regarded as Was the Armistice Versailles Treaty Held Vindictive But Britain Will Continue to Arm

By Roger W. Babson.

London, October 15.—The great statesmen, bankers, industrialists and economists of Great Britain unanimously agree that we may now be entering a boom era exceeding in extent that of the twenties. You will recall that after the Armistice was signed we had a period of unprece dented business expansion. New all-time peaks for business activity were reached early in 1920. Now, the "big business" men of England believe that the world may be facing a similar situation in the months ahead.

Why are they so optimistic? The answer is that they consider the Munich Conference in somewhat the same light as the Armistice. They feel that the partitation of Czechoslovakia has removed a powder keg which could have exploded into a general war any time. Most students of history over here agree that the Treaty of Versailles was a ruthless and vindictive document. It set up artificial nations composed of an arbitrary combination of nationalities with boundaries drawn simply from the standpoint of military considerations. It also imposed terrific financial burdens upon Germany.

Treaty Scrapping

It was inevitable that some day the Reich would regain her strength and throw off the humiliating provisions of the peace treaty. Readers have watched Hitler do this in the last three years through rearmament, occupation of the Rhineland and conquest of Austria. The next step was Czechoslovakia. All European statesmen knew that the "synthetic country" problem had to be solved sooner or late. The economic prosperity of Europe depended upon it. Fearing reactions, however, no statesman before Hitler had the courage to take this bull by the horns.

So the removal of this powder keg is the major reason for optimism today in England. But the settlement of the Sudeten issue is of great importance for a longer period as well. Why? Because up until the present crisis, neither Hitler nor Mussolini had met Chamberlain. They had thought of England as a declining power and of the British Premier as a timid, narrow-minded business man. Naturally, such an attitude was not favorable to peace. But at Munich, Hitler and Mussolini found Chamberlain a strong, courageous man. He made a powerful impression upon them and the three have apparently become good personal friends. As a result, other cancerous problems, such as the Spanish and Chinese wars, may also be cleaned up.

Roosevelt Aids Peace

Hence, it appears at the moment that we may have world peace as long as these three statesmen live and control Europe. This will be especially so if President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull continue to help. Their strong appeals to world public opinion have already had a great effect. Moreover, our reciprocal trade agreements are hitting at one of the basic causes of world unrest —economic distress. I cannot now venture any forecast that there will be no European war in 1939. There may be more war scares over the next few months—perhaps sooner than most people expect. However, the new understanding among Europe's three big men gives real hope that new difficulties can be solved without war.

Yet, the English are not banking on peace. They do not intend to stop rearming and be caught napping again. They realize how much they have had "to take" because they were not ready to fight Mussolini and Hitler. Continued war preparation is, therefore, another stimulant for the near-term outlook. The arms program will continue at a feverish pace for at least two years more. It requires the decentralization of munition and airplane plants. Most important of all, it means the armor-plating of the decks of battleships so that they cannot be sunk by bombing planes.

Inflation

Another factor in the business outlook is the probability of inflation. The bankers with whom I talk seem resigned to the thought that the world is headed for inflation. They see no hope of any country going back to the gold basis. They feel the massive armament programs of all major powers require some form of currency tinkering to finance them. One of the most impressive thoughts driven home to me on this visit is that inflation is inevitable. It has started on the Continent; it is now spreading to England, and is sure to affect the United States and Canada.

Still another optimistic business item is the change in the British attitude concerning their debt to us. They realize that they are dependent on the United States for raw materials, foodstuffs, etc. They naturally would have to borrow money from us to pay for these supplies in wartime. They want to re-establish their credit with us. Therefore, there is a marked movement afoot over here to make a compromise on the huge debt which England owes America. This would get the pending Anglo-American trade pact off to a flying start and help business in both countries.

Business Boom Ahead

As a result of these cheerful foreign developments, I am able to give you the following optimistic report on the business outlook for the next few months:

I am convinced that American business will score further sharp and healthy gains. Christmas trade this year could easily be the best in eight seasons. Seldom in my 35 years' experience have I been able to make a more definite and emphatic forecast of better times!

MR. MILQUETOAST FINDS HIS BALL EIGHT INCHES FROM AN IRRIGATION DITCH

Bob Burns Says—

I haven't got anything against classical music, but I believe its followers are divided into two classes—those who really know and appreciate it and then there's that class of people who jest go into ecstacy over it because they think it's the proper thing to do.

I know one woman who was jest thrilled to death when she heard that she was livin' in the same apartment house as a noted concert violinist.

One day she heard his violin going and she rushed over and knocked on the door of his apartment and when he came to the door, she says, "I jest wanted to find out the name of that wonderful theme you were playing. It has such freedom and wild abandon about it!" The violinist looked at her with a frown and says, "Madam, I was jest putting a new E string on my violin!"

Union Mission Holds Record Drive Rally

Seeks $125,000 Fund
Campaign on Saturday
Team Leaders Named

One of the largest "pep" rallies in the history of Central Union Mission drives was held yesterday afternoon in the organization's chapel to discuss details of the John S. Bennett campaign. This opens October 22 at the fifty-fourth annual banquet at the Mayflower Hotel to raise $125,000 for a new wing to the present Mission structure as a memorial to the late superintendent.

E. H. DeGroot, jr., chairman of the men's division of the campaign, presided with Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of the Mission. It was announced that campaign reporting luncheons will be held October 27, November 1 and November 4, and a victory dinner November 7. Places for the luncheons will be announced later. A plan to use a midtown church awaits confirmation from the church's governing board.

Dr. Viola Reese, a veteran of all the Central Union Mission campaigns, reported a complete organization of captains and teams. There will be ten colonels for the men's division and the same number for the women's.

The following were announced as colonels and captains for the men's division: Colonel, William H. Ramsey; captains, W. F. Schmucker, Austin M. Cooper, C. E. Bogardus, George L. Russell and Hugh Harstin; colonel, Leonard W. DeGast; captains, Howard Palmer, W. H. Harrison, P. L. Rogers and George L. Ward; colonel, W. S. Anderson; captains, Walter I. Aiken and Alfred Henson; colonel, John Bateman, captains, Leonard Sherfey, Alden Webster, Harry K. Ellerbrook, Grover L. Strong and W. F. A. Treichel; colonel, Richard A. Bauer; captains, the Rev. Virgil Hobbs, Howard Saxton, J. E. Acton, G. A. Gooch and A. H. Gill.

Women officers announced were: Colonel, Mrs. W. H. Ramsey; captains, Mrs. Earle Wilfley, Mrs. Marion Lord, Mrs. Edgar Beery, Mrs. Sallie J. Douglass and Mrs. Sam D. Hardy; colonel, Miss Edna Fussell; captains, Miss Carrie Williams, Miss Sallie Dean, Mrs. W. L. Harrison, Miss Mary Terell, Miss Helen Boss and Mrs. C. N. Chipman; colonel, Miss Charlotte Darrow; captains, Miss Norma Eisminger, Mrs. Mary Gill, Mrs. Hattie Ruppert and Mrs. F. J. Hobbs; colonel, Mrs. Clifford Lewis; captains—Miss Estelle Zirkin, Miss Isabel MacDonald, Mrs. Allen N. Rowlett, Miss Mary Bourke and Miss Mary Hantzmon; colonel, Dr. Viola Reese; captains, Mrs. Clyde Crouch, Mrs. Richard Sauer, Mrs. R. H. Talbott, Mrs. Alvia Jones and Mrs. Howard Ellis.

Shoppers Told Press Is Unfair To Labor News

Publishers Cited
CIO-AFL Split Blamed
'Unslanted' Daily Asked

Three newspapermen, speaking before 400 members and guests of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, expressed themselves as substantially in accord that the labor viewpoint and activities are not fairly represented in the American press today.

The three, Paul Y. Anderson, correspondent for the Nation and the St. Louis Star-Times; Delbert Clark, of the Washington bureau of the New York Times, and Robert S. Allen, columnist, spoke at a noon breakfast at Congressional Country Club.

Anderson cited handling by Chicago and New York papers of the Memorial Day, 1937, massacre at the Republic Steel plant in Chicago, and the subsequent violence at Massillon.

Publishers of large newspapers are large-scale employers, he said, and "employers have become more class conscious than employes." He said part of the one-sidedness of presentation of disputes arises from the fact that most frequently police chiefs and other police authorities are quoted.

Maintenance of labor organizations of well trained news reporters was suggested by Clark. A more important cause of the "obvious hostility" between labor and the press, Clark said, was the lack of unity in the ranks of labor itself. He pointed to the days preceding C. I. O. activity when the A. F. of L. received careful attention.

"When labor split, the papers took sides, usually only one side," he said. The depression itself, which produced a sort of general emotionalism and a number of cranks offering panaceas too foolish to credit, may account for some of the cynicism of newspapermen, he added.

Clark suggested the establishment of a labor-supported daily newspaper, of general news coverage and "unslanted" toward labor or any other faction, as the best solution to the problem.

Allen agreed this was the best solution.

Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel is president of the league. Mrs. Helen Hill Miller was chairman of the meeting.

Negro Congress Protests 'Abuse' Of Women in Job Mob Scene

Appeal on Charwomen Is Sent to President
Brown Accused of Permitting Brutality
Body Demands Special Relief Grant for Race

A strongly-worded five-point program for correcting "basic social maladjustment" of a large portion of the Capital's 150,000 colored citizens yesterday was dispatched to President Roosevelt, the District Commissioners, Superintendent of Police, Public Assistance Division and Civil Service Commission by an "emergency conference" of the Washington council of the National Negro Congress.

Representatives of churches, trade unions and civic organizations, citing chaotic conditions at the Fourth Precinct police station Wednesday when 15,000 women sought 2,000 application blanks for jobs as charwomen, demanded:

Establishment by the WPA of more projects for colored persons and transfer of the District from administration Region No. 2 to No. 1, where wagerates "are more commensurate with the unusually high costs of living in this community."

Creation of a representative commission on colored life in Washington, authorized to conduct a comprehensive survey, with an appropriation from the Commissioners, of social and economic problems of the city's colored population.

Dismissal of Maj. Ernest Brown, "who has demonstrated over many years his unwillingness or his inability to curb abuse of Negro citizens by police officers under his supervision" and punishment of officers responsible for "discourtesy and abuse" in handling last week's crowd of jobseekers.

Colored Man, Hit By 2 Autos, Claims 'Iron Man, Title

Last night he was in fair condition in Montgomery County General Hospital with little more than a broken jaw and contusions after being knocked down by one automobile and run over by another on the Laytonsville-Woodfield road near Gaithersburg. Police said he was struck first, in a dense fog, by an automobile driven by Elmer Hines, of Gaithersburg, who was not sure he had struck anything and drove a short distance down the road before returning to verify his suspicion.
